Two Brothers Are Jailed in $250,000 Cape Cod Kidnap Plot; $60,000 Is Returned

M'MATH ABDUCTION IS BARED AS GIRL IDENTIFIES CULPRIT

Kenneth Buck Gives Up Ill-Gotten Loot and Tells of Time Child's Life Was in Peril in Fire; New Arrest Looms as State Police Obtain Warrant rackets—the theft of a little child.

In Kenneth's home, from under the eaves of an old concave Colonial roof, from out of a worn coffee canister in the pantry, every one of the $60,000 in bills so ransom was recovered by the police.

This money, it was understood last night, was raised in Detroit by pledging the securities of a trust fund established for Mrs. Margaret Kales McMath, the child's mother.

SCORNS HIS SHARE

Kenneth alone thought out the details of the actual plot and executed them without the knowledge of his brother, he said.

"I'm ashamed," he sobbed.

The plan occurred to him last Sunday, he said. He had been jobless for nine months. His brother's home was to be taken by mortgage foreclosure.

On Tuesday he blackened his face with burnt cork to make himself look like a Cape Cod Brava, and donned white gloves to hide his hands.

From South Chatham he made the two telephone calls that laid the trap for success of his scheme —one to the Harwich school, asking Peggy's early dismissal to meet "the Negro chauffeur"—the other to the McMath home, posing as a lineup, reuniting that the receiver he kept off the hook so there could be no check-back from the school.

In his own blue sedan he drove to the school and kidnaped Peggy.

Feared for Life of Child as Fire Swept Toward Her "Prison"

He took her only a little distance away, to a small shack which is located near the eighth green and ninth tee of the Harwichport Golf Club. He left her in the shack and went home.

He heard of a grass fire near the shack and became alarmed for his prisoner's safety. Donning knickers and carrying his clubs, he went back to the course and actually played a few holes, making sure the flames had not reached the shack.

Several persons playing the course passed the little house where the girl was locked. She had promised to make no outcry, and she did not.

CYRIL TAKES A HAND

After dark he went back to the shack, got Peggy and drove her to an unfurnished house almost opposite his own, very near her own. There she stayed until turned over to her father.

Not until Wednesday morning, he said, did he tell his brother, Cyril, of what he had done. Then Cyril began his role as contact man in the ransom demands.

Kenneth had Peggy write notes to her father. These Cyril delivered, together with Peggy's lunch box. McMath was convinced the negotiators had his child and he was taken out to the yacht Bob, on which Peggy was found Friday by the police.

There there was a bizarre conference. Kenneth wore a hood and spoke as word, writing his demands. McMath was asked to raise $250,000. He countered with an offer of $25,000.

Kenneth wrote a note to Cyril to get as much as he could. McMath went up to $52,000. Finally he agreed to pay $70,000. Kenneth told McMath two other men were involved, that they would have to have $50,000, that he and Cyril would take $10,000.

McMath went ashore, got the money, returned to the yacht and passed it over in three bundles, $50,000 and two of $10,000 each. Cyril refused to take his $10,000 and McMath took it home with him.

Then McMath was taken, blindfolded, in a car to a spot almost in front of Kenneth's home. Peggy was taken blindfolder from the house. All drove back to McMath's home where the promise was extracted that Peggy would be taken aboard the yacht, there to remain for 24 to 48 hours before McMath announced the child's return.

Today Kenneth will be driven over the route of his story for a more detailed statement.

The two brothers had been left in a jail cell with State Detective Joseph Ferrari before they finally confessed after many hours of grilling. The detective, holding in front of him a newspaper story of the crime, gently urged the younger brother:

"come on, what do you say?"

AFRAID TO TELL

"All right," said Kenneth suddenly, "I'll tell it all."

Sobbing like a baby, he told it. Once, he revealed, he had been tempted while Peggy was still a captive to confess his deed to a Harwichport priest, Rev. Columbe Moran. He was afraid.

Through a maze of intrigue and stubborn deceit and hard won admissions, State detectives, led by Brig.-Gen. Daniel Needham, public safety commissioner, slashed their way to the bizarrely-woven and garrishly-colored pattern of crime at the heart of what Needham called "Massachusetts most spectacular case."

From reluctant lips that told only a part of the truth at first came the story of a strange plot that was something like a stage kidnaping. Something differing but little from a recent radio crime play. Something with a tinge of the Lindbergh case to it, but happily with a different ending for the little victom.

PEGGY IDENTIFIES ONE

Kenneth Buck led police to the money after vainly trying to deceive them into the belief that he had only $10,000 and that two other men, "two strangers who did the job," got the $50,000.

Black-eyed Peggy herself, haplily residing with her family, identified Kenneth Buck as the man in the hood who drove her and her father from the house where she had been held captive from Tuesday afternoon until early Friday morning.

The break of the case came aboard the Coast Guard training ship at the Woods Hole base yesterday morning after the four men found on the Bob by police had been questioned for 156 hours with only a brief pause for breakfast. These men were McMath, William Lee, owner of the boat and the official spokesman; Harold Sawyer, an employe of Lee, and Cyril Buck.

State Detective John Stokes was questioning Buck who finally, heaving a sigh, remarked:

"Well, I'm on a spot either way. If I take the rap that will end it, won't it?"

"Regardless of that we will keep after this case until we know the whole story," General Needham answered.

So Cyril "broke," told his part, implicated his brother.

BOTH NEED MONEY

Kenneth and Cyril Buck live a few houses apart. Kenneth has a son, Junior, seven, the exact age of the McMath boy, Francis. Cyril has no children.

They are the sons of Mrs. Bertha Buck, an elderly, gray-haired and wrinkled woman, typical of Cape Cod old age, who stood appalled in the center of a batch of freshly baked pies at the news her sons were involved in the kidnaping.

Kenneth used to run a jitney along the Cape roads and once was a private chauffeur. He has been unemployed for nine months. He ran for constable at the last town election and was defeated. A few months ago he tried to get a job as caretaker of the McMath estate but was not successful.

Cyril is the proprietor of a garage in Harwichport. An excellent mechanic, he stood in danger of losing his home by mortgage foreclosure. He needed money.

They were arrested in the street near their home soon after Peggy had identified Kenneth's blue sedan as the car in which she was kidnaped.

"$60,000,000 GRIEF"

Soon afterward McMath accosted Kenneth and shaking his finger at the younger man, exclaimed:

"You got $60,000 from me but it caused us $60,000,000 worth of grief and anxiety!"

Kenneth offered to return the $50,000 he said was his share if police would let him leave the Barnstable jail alone for half an hour. They refused.

Finally, under pressure, he said he would take them to the hiding place. He was piled into a car with State Detectives Stokes, Brouillard, Sherlock and Ferrari.

"Which way?" asked Stokes, at the wheel.

"My home," was the surly answer.

They drove him home. His wife was there, red-eyed from weeping.

He went into a closet and emerged with the $10,000 in a bundle in his hands.

"All right," he said. "Come on."

"I think we better have the rest," said Stokes. It was pure bluff.

Kenneth went up stairs, ducked into another closet heading under the eves and opened the small door of a sub-closet leading off that. From a pile of newspapers there he took another bundle. It was $4000.

"That's all I've got," he said.

From his actions, police were pretty well convinced he knew where the remainder was hidden. Also, they had talked with his wife.

"We'll take the big bundle and leave here them," said Sherlock.

So he went into a pantry closet and picked up a coffee can. He opened the can, thrust his hand in and withdrew the remainder of the ransom money—$46,000.

Cyril Buck, who had previously admitted having acted as the go-between in the ransom negotiations, blamed his brother for involving him.

"I didn't want to go into the thing but I sort of had to and I went and saw McMath," he said.

"I went down aboard Lee's boat to negotiate with the kidnapers. I got her blue lunchbox and brought it back to McMath and told him the name of Peggy's dog, which he had asked me to get as assurance I knew where she was."

Mother's Spartan Courage Kept Heart Steeled Against Torture

Mrs. McMath and Peggy Meet the Thoroughbred Test in Three Days of Anguish

By JOHN H. NOONAN

Boston Sunday Advertiser Staff Correspondent.

Harwichport, May 6—Down in Louisville, Ky., tonight the telegraph wires are clacking out the Derby story of the thoroughbreds. The story of a race.

But this is the story of the real thoroughbred — Peggy Gray McMath, the little girl who didn't cry and the gentlewoman who is her mother.

And, after a fashion, it is also the story of a race—an incongruous human race that develops on one side such stiff-lipped, courageous women as Mrs. Margaret Kales McMath and such children as her little girl, and on the other spawns black hearts and black schemes for their torture.

Happy Days Again

Call it heart or call it courage. Call it blood, if you will. Whatever it is under the flesh that goes to make up thoroughbreds, Peggy and her mother found it deep within them over three days of anguish and sorrow and met the test.

On the broad porch of the rambling Colonial house where the McMaths live, Mrs. McMath, hatless, wisps of her brown hair stirred by the breeze from the bay, faced a semi-circle of reporters and photographers here today for the first time since the kidnaping of her little girl last Tuesday and bared a single glimpse of the torture she bore without shedding a single tear.

Beyond her, nose snubbed against a window-pane of the living, the child who "never cried" during three days of harsh treatment at the hands of her captors, stared out wide-eyed at the interest displayed in her—and waved her hand.

PEGGY McMATH MEETS HER MOTHER

Peggy smiled. She had come smiling out of the black hole where she had been held prisoner until $70,000 was paid to someone.

"I want to tell you that the world is a lot different for all of us this morning," said Mrs. McMath. "It is a happy one."

In the reaction from her worry, she was unbending. She spoke as if she were making a little formal address at a club luncheon.

Beyond her Peggy grinned, and waved again. And beside Peggy's head at the window appeared that of her brother, Francis, seven. He, too, was eager to miss nothing that went on.

Peggy Appears Shy

"I want to express my thanks to you newspapermen and women for your consideration of Peggy and myself last night," Mrs. McMath went on. Her brown eyes, flecked with grey, traveled from face to face in the little group.

"Your restraint in handling this affair has helped greatly towards its happy conclusion. Last night we were very weary and needed rest, and you made rest possible for us."

Her voice trembled a little while she spoke.

She made a little bow.

"Thank you," she said.

She turned and went into the house for a moment, returned smiling.

"Peggy wants to say that she's very glad to be home again," she announced.

Peggy posed with her mother for pictures. She appeared shy. She wore a pink dress, much the color like the one in which she was stolen. There were little red, blue and green figures in it against a white background. She kept fingering them. She reached down to tug a slipping white sock.

Sail Toy Boat Again

Her mother revealed Peggy had slept until 8:30 this morning, without sedatives, and this morning had an enormous breakfast of scrambled eggs and bacon, toast, cereal and two glasses of orange juice, a welcome change from her ham sandwich, milk and coffee diet while held captive.

After breakfast she and Francis sailed a toy boat in an artificial pool in the garden behind the house, overlooking Wychmere harbor, where she was found yesterday aboard the yacht. Scrub pines and blowing jonquils formed a picturesque setting fo the reunion of brother and sister.

Through McMath's cousin, Trent McMath, Detroit prosecutor, it was learned that McMath had been in touch with his family through the night by telepone from Woods Hole.

WIVES LOYAL TO BROTHERS IN KIDNAPING

Mate of Kenneth Buck, Thinks Others Were Master Minds in Peggy McMath Plot

By ARTHUR J. QUINN

(Boston Sunday Advertiser Staff Correspondent)

Harwich, May 6—Until Kenneth Buck admits to her his part in the Peggy McMath kidnaping, his young wife, mother of a seven-year-old girl, will believe him innocent.

And if her husband and his brother took the part that is charged, others were the actual plotters, Mrs. Kenneth Buck told the Boston Sunday Advertiser tonight.

She told the story of what she termed a "terrible nightmare" between spells of crying and frequent glances to an upstairs bedroom where her own child was sound in an innocent sleep.

Mrs. Buck is a lifelong resident of Cape Cod; sturdy of build and younger appearing than her 32 years.

HAVE MODEST HOME

She sat in the modest front room of her eight-room house in Banks st., the same house in which her husband recovered for State Detective John F. Stokes, the $60,000 that had been placed on the head of Peggy McMath.

"This is all a nightmare to me, I still can't believe the many stories."

The opening was accompanied by a deep sigh.

"I never had the slightest idea that my husband or anyone belonging to him could possibly have been involved in the kidnaping as I read it from day to day.

"Not until this afternoon when my husband walked in with Detective Stokes, that I get the first information my husband took part—if he did.

"I cannot believe myself that he is the kidnaper. It seems to me that he must be the victim of some plot.

"I didn't have the slightest idea that since Thursday there was $10,000 in this house."

When Mrs. Buck was reminded that $60,000, the entire ransom payment, was found in the house, her tears flowed unchecked.

"All I knew about was the $10,000" was her opening after she recovered her composure.

NEW WORLD COLLAPSES

"He sent me to the closet and told me where to find a bundle. He told me there was $10,000 in it. I didn't know it was in the house until he told me just where to go to find it.

"I left the room then. I was too overcome to stay. It seemed that I couldn't see and the little world, you might say, that we lived in here seemed to fall.

"Then the crowd started to gather around the house. It was too much and I left. Probably then they found the rest of the money you speak of.

"I do not believe my husband and his brother—if they did this —were the actual plotters. It must have been somebody much smarter.

HAD NO SUSPICIONS

"Kenneth went out Thursday night, and when he returned I was asleep.

"Ever since this was in the newspapers he never showed the slightest indication that he had any connection with it.

"He discussed the case with me, and several times he said, 'Yes, it's a terrible thing to do.'"

Mrs. Buck glanced again at the upstairs bedroom. She heard the even, peaceful breathing of her own daughter—and asked to be excused.

Mrs. Cyril Buck, wife of the other brother under arrest, entered the house as the interview ended. They clasped each other and cried.

Mrs. Cyril Buck declared her utmost faith in her husband.

"In fact I see no reason for defending him," she said. "I am sure any part he played was an innocent one.

believed she would kep her promise—and she did.

I left my brother's garage about 2:50, went to a school where my own little boy was, Kenneth, Jr., 7 years old, to get him and take him home.

I used my own car in the kidnaping, a black 1927 sedan, registration 185,068.

After returning home I had a bad fright, because a grass fire broke out not far from the little house where the girl lay. The fire department went down to put it out. I though they must have discovered the little girl. To determine this I went out to play golf, planning to look into the shed near the eighth green, but I did not go near the building.

McMATH HOODED, TOO

"I did go back after dark, and I took Peggy to a house almost opposite my own. It was not occupied. I placed her on the floor of the cellar. There she stayed until Thursday night, when she was returned to her father, McMath was driven, with a black hood over his head, to the street almost in front of that house.

Peggy was brought out, placed in the car and was driven to these boats. At no time did I carry a gun.

During the Tuesday fire at the golf links I had in my pocket a note addressed to McMath, in effect telling him not to report the kidnaping to the press or police. Thinking that Peggy was discovered by firemen, I tore up the note and threw it away. After I discovered she was still there, I began to figure out a contact for McMath, and finally decided I would appeal to my brother to act as intermediary. This I did the following morning, which was the first time my brother had any knowledge of my connection with the kidnaping.

From then on my brother acted as intermediary in a manner already known. I had the little girl write notes.

WANTED $250,000

In these conversations I did not speak at any time. I made answer by writing, and wore a black hood all the time I was in McMath's company. My original ransom demand was $250,000.

McMath made a counter offer of $25,000. Then I told my brother to get as much as he could. McMath went up to $52,000 and on the next contact agreed to $70,000.

WEEPS DURING CONFESSION

Gen. Needham said Buck had frequently broken down and wept during his confession. Buck said he was ashamed of himself, declared he had been good to his wife and that he heartily regretted the kidnaping.

Gen. Needham said there would be a complete check-up on details of the confession tomorrow.

Assassin Fires on Ex-Mayor in Ohio

An occupant of a speeding automobile fired at the ex-city official in front of his automobile sales room.

Then ullet shattered a plate glass window inches from Gordon's head.

Bank Commissioner of Maine Resigns

August, Me., May 6 (INS)—Sanger N. Annis, bank commissioner of Maine, resigned this afternoon and his resignation was immediately accepted by Gov. Louis J. Brann and his executive council.

Governor Brann stated that a new commissioner would be appointed on Monday.

Wife Sobs as Police Grill Buck; Tells of Dinner Party

While the questioning of the brothers was under way, Cyril Buck's wife, weeping, was being interrogated by other officers. She said she had not seen her husband since he left home Wednesday night, the time he claims he first learned of the plot and began his activities as the go-between.

On that very night she had a dinner engagement with her husband at the home of Theodore Holmes, brother of Miss Ruth Holmes, the school superintendent's secretary who received the hoax phone call that resulted in Peggy's early dismissal from school into the kidnapers' hands.

After the brothers had been rushed to jail, General Needham, who has had only about four hours sleep in the last two days, discussed the case with newspapermen for a few minutes.

First Inside Story of Seizure of 'Sanctuary' Boat by Cape Kidnaping Probers

HOME AND HAPPY—For four days Peggy McMath was the most sought-for girl in the world. Held in kidnapers' clutches, she was not happy. But that experience is past now. She's home and happy again. Her mother, Mrs. Nel C. McMath, too, is through with the anguish that haunted her those four days that the little girl was away from their Harwichport home.

It was Cyril who carried on the negotiations for Peggy's return. He is under arrest in connection with the case being implicated by his brother's admissions.

THIS IS THE CAR—Margaret "Peggy" McMath identifies big, blue sedan as car the kidnapers used both when they seized her in front of Harwich grammar school and when they returned her to the Bob, the boat of her father's friend.

POLICE SUSPICIOUS OF 'BOB' AFTER CAMERAMAN THREAT

State police and the Coast Guard swept aside a claim of "family agreement with the kidnapers" to restore Peggy McMath to her mother's arms.

Complete details leading up to the finding of the kidnaped child aboard her father's partner's yacht a short distance from her home were revealed last night for the first time.

It is not true that the investigators first became suspicious of William Lee's yacht "Bob" Friday noon.

Coast Guard Commander R. R. Patch of the Woods Hole base was in conference with Brig. Gen. Needham, Dist. Atty. Crossley and detectives about the "Bob" at midnight Thursday, in the Melrose Hotel, Harwichport.

State Trooper Harold Delaney, assigned from the State House to accompany George Bacon, vice-president of the Merchants National Bank of Boston to Harwichport with the ransom money, reported back to Capt. Bligh at the State House Thursday night. The detectives knew, of course, that the $70,000 sent to Harwich was to be used for ransom.

Gen. Needham and State Detective Edward J. Sherlock went to the McMath home at about 6 o'clock Thursday night. There they found and talked with Lee.

At 8 o'clock Friday morning a Boston Sunday Advertiser photographer went down to the harbor to make a picture of Lee's boat. There was no rowboat along the shore in which he could get out to the yacht and he tried to borrow one at the Lee-McMath boatyard.

"You can't photograph that boat," said an employe of the yard.

"I'd like to know why I can't," was the photographer's rejoinder.

"Well, you can't get any boat here," was the surly response.

"I'll get one somewhere" said the photographer.

"If you do," said the shipyard worker, "there's two fast engines aboard the 'Bob' and we'll run you down."

Admits Girl's Return

This conversation was made known to the authorities. At the Friday morning press conference Lee was questioned as to his and McMath's whereabouts at the time of the kidnaping. He said they were at the boatyard.

"You were out on a boat at one time during the afternoon, weren't you?" was one question.

"Yes, but only for a little while," was the answer.

At noon of Friday, Needham and Sherlock again went to the McMath home and again interviewed Lee. The "official spokesman," subjected to severe questioning, finally said Peggy had been returned to her father early that morning.

Lee told the authorities that the girl told her father, Cyril Buck, Harwichport garage man, and Harold Sawyer, who works in the Lee-McMath boatyard, were aboard the "Bob."

He told them that the family had made an agreement with the kidnapers, at the time the ransom was paid over, that they would not notify the authorities until 48 hours had elapsed and that Peggy would have to remain aboard the Bob during that time.

Gen. Needham, Dist. Atty. Crossley and the detectives again went into a huddle.

They determined upon a strange course of action in view of the circumstances. There was evident fear that the "Bob" might flee the harbor.

2 Boats in Chase

General Needham in a fast car went over the road 40 miles to the Woods Hole Coast Guard base to which Commdr. Patch earlier in the morning had returned, waiting for developments.

They left the base in not one but two fast picket boats, both converted rum-runners, one formerly the "Trent," the other formerly "Auf Wiedersehen."

The first boat pulled alongside the "Bob." The yacht appeared to be deserted. No one was visible on deck. A Coast Guardsman jumped from the picket boat to the other's deck and made a line fast. He dropped into the cabin.

"Peggy" sat at the cabin table beside her father. She was drinking a glass of milk. Buck and Sawyer reclined in the two bunks.

A maximum of 25 years in state prison is the present penalty in Massachusetts for conviction of kidnaping with intent to extort, but a bill has been introduced in the House which would make the penalty death in the electric chair.

All those connected illegally with negotiations resulting in payment of ransom can be prosecuted, under the law, as accessories, and refused of those taking part in the negotiations to co-operate with police is a felony.

If there should be found a federal angle to the Peggy McMath kidnaping at Harwich, the matter will be presented to the federal grand jury on Tuesday, it was stated yesterday by Asst. U. S. Atty. Haven Parker.

Mother Fatalities Drive Opens Sunday

In conjunction with Mother's Day observance, Sunday, May 14, the Massachusetts public health department, under Dr. M. Luise Diez, director of the division of child hygiene, will launch a campaign for the furtherance of adequate medical care for expectant mothers.

Dr. Diez announced an average of 369 such cases prove fatal yearly in Massachusetts, due to lack of medical care and attention.

turned me over so that I was facing the rear of the back seat. He then bound my chin in such a way as to have my face covered.

"He started to stuff some cloth down my throat and when I objected he told me again that if I didn't follow his instructions he would chloroform me.

"He then got into the front seat, I believe. The car went backward and it seemed that we turned around. We then rode what seemed like a long while."

Gen. Needham explained at that point that further questioning of Peggy brought a reply that she might have been riding only 20 minutes.

"I think another man got in the car.

"Finally we got to a shack and he carried me into it. It was only one room. I think the man who drove me there drove off and the other man put me on the floor and put an overcoat under my head for a pillow.

"I was able by this time to put my knees up in such a way as to loosen the ropes on my hand and the blindfold slipped enough so I was able to look around and see the floor. As far as I could see there was no furniture in the shack.

"It seemed it was a one-story shack and there were cracks in the wall.

"I was left alone for a long time each day. I think it was dark at a time when a man came in and told me I was going to be moved. He unbound the rope that held my arms and took off the handcuffs but kept me blindfolded.

"We then started to walk across lots and at one time a dog barked and I could see a little as we moved into the edge of some woods. He picked me up in his arms and jumped a ditch.

"I think we were walking about an hour but it doesn't seem we walked more than one mile until we came to the next house.

In a Second Prison

"Where we were seemed to be under a place that is used to keep garden tools. It was a low place and in it I saw part of a mattress. He told me to lie down on it.

"Afterwards he put a blanket around me. It was still dark. He then took off the blindfold and warned me never to look at him."

Gen. Needham then explained that Peggy was very frank to say that she made no effort to look at the man, neither was she able to give any description other than that he was a white man.

"We stayed there all Tuesday night, Wednesday and Wednesday night, all day Thursday and part of Thursday night. I was left alone during the day but each night the man came and brought some food.

"The first night he brought ham sandwiches, and milk. The next night he brought ham sandwiches and cocoa. He had a flashlight that night. He told me to eat whenever I felt like it. I asked him to bring me something else besides ham sandwiches and he said that was all he could get.

Door Is Locked

"He only came at night and never let the flashlight shine on his face, but I could see his hands were white. He told me I could eat the things he brought any time I wanted to.

"He said he wanted to take me to a comfortable cottage, but he was afraid to.

"There was a little door in the place but it was locked. I never tried to stand up but stayed lying down all the time. There was cement on one side and a wall on the other side.

"Thursday night, late, he came and said he was able to take me back to my father and mother. He blindfolded me and took me in the front seat of an auto and we drove a long way.

"He told me my father was in the back seat but I was not to talk to him. After a while he took off the blindfold and I looked around and my father was in the back seat.

"I got into the seat with my father. Cyril Buck was driving and a man with a hood over his head was sitting in the front seat beside him. I think he was the man who said he was my friend and fed me. His hood had two points on it. He looked like a bunny.

Refuses to Doff Hood

"My father said he'd better take that off as it would attract attention but he didn't take it off. We rode quite a while until we reached the pond (Wychmere harbor). I got out and we got into a little boat and rode out to the Bob (a boat owned by William Lee, business associate of Neil C. McMath, the child's father). The man with the hood told us to do this.

"We stayed there that night and all the next day. Someone was to bring some food but didn't. About all we had was some canned soup and biscuits.

"My father said the kidnapers made him promise to stay there for 48 hours without letting anybody know where we were. Yesterday afternoon we saw the Coastguard boat pull alongside and my father said, 'there is nothing we can do about it now. We've been discovered.' We wanted some food, anyway."

And when little Peggy had concluded her story and was laid to rest on a couch in an adjoining compartment, Gen. Needham remarked, "she's a little brick!"

Bacon Won't Tell Who Got $60,000 In Ransom Cash

Vice-President George E. Bacon of the Merchants National Bank of Boston, declared to have taken part in handling of the McMath ransom money, refused yesterday to give any information regarding his alleged participation when he returned home from Harwich.

His only admission was that the newspapers were carrying the correct sum, $60,000, in their late reports.

50 Years for "Faith Healing" Slayer

Linden, Tex., May 6 (INS)—Paul Oakley, 26-year-old itinerant evangelist of the deep piney woods section of Cass County, was found guilty today of murdering little Bernice Clayton, 3-year-old paralytic, during a "faith healing" ceremony in her father's backwoods cabin. The jury fixed the sentence at 50 years' imprisonment.

Petition to Disbar Boston Attorney

The Boston Bar Association filed a petition to disbar Atty. Samuel Neiterman, with offices on Washington st., Boston, in Superior court yesterday.

The petition charges Neiterman with deceit, malpractice and gross misconduct in connection with two cases he handled for clients.

129 Dynamite Sticks Stolen on Road Job

A total of 129 sticks of dynamite was stolen from a shed located on the new state road construction job near the Scituate-Cohasset line.

NAME OF DEAD DOG WAS CODE

Here is a summary of the reported negotiations which brought about Peggy McMath's release from her kidnapers, as reconstructed by Gen. Daniel Needham, state police head, in active leadership on the case:

"On last Thursday night there was a conference aboard the boat, the Bob. Present were McMath, Cyril Buck and Kenneth Buck. Kenneth was wearing a hood so as not to disclose his identity. Cyril had previously indicated to McMath that he could contact the kidnapers.

"Cyril told the father to bring three packages of money, one containing $50,000 and the other two containing $10,000 each.

"McMath, mentioning that he had the Lindbergh case in mind, said he wanted to be sure that he was in touch with the kidnapers.

"So he asked for a piece of Peggy's dress and also wrote out a question for Peggy to answer. The question, the answer to which he thought she alone would know, was:

"'What was the name of your dog who died last December?'

"Buck transmitted these to the stranger who returned to McMath through Buck a piece of Peggy's dress, and in Peggy's handwriting, the correct answer to the question:

"'Peter the Great.'

"McMath, who lives a short distance away, went home and returned with the money. When McMath returned to the conference with the money he brought three packages as requested—one of $50,000 and two of $10,000 each. He handed it over to the hooded Kenneth. Kenneth took two of the packages, a $50,000 and a $10,000 package, and handed the other $10,000 package to Cyril."

Davis to Make New Attempt to Gain Britain's Favor for Quick Tariff Truce

U. S. HOPE OF TRADE BOOM IS AT STAKE

Powerful Bloc in Cabinet Is Opposed to Plan Given by Roosevelt in Recent Parley

London, May 6 (AP)—After he had packed his bags to go to the Geneva disarmament conference, Norman H. Davis, President Roosevelt's special ambassador, received new instructions today to stay in London and do his utmost to impel Britain to agree to an immediate tariff truce.

Mr. Davis faced a difficult task, as a powerful conservative bloc in the cabinet opposes the armistice. It was reliably reported the Washington government was willing to go far, however, in meeting any objections.

SEEK BRITISH STAND

Short of British adherence to the American truce proposal, the Washington government would like to obtain a definite declaration of the British position. This entails amplification of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald's statement that Britain cannot participate in the agreement unless her own tariff position is protected by "safeguards."

Particular importance was attached to Baltain's attitude because it was taken for granted other nations were delaying their decisions to follow the British lead.

The American Ambassador-at-Large had no formal conference on his schedule today, but he proceeded to carry out his new instructions from Washington in private conversations.

HELD LITTLE HOPE

American quarters here have held little hope that Britain would participate in a truce before the opening of the World Economic Conference, June 12, and there has been considerable doubt about her adherence after the conference sessions have started.

Text of Roosevelt and Jung Statement

(By the Associated Press)

The text of the joint statement of President Roosevelt and Guido Jung, Italian finance minister, following their discussion on world recovery plans at Washington yesterday follows:

"At the close of our conversations we note with profound satisfaction that close similarity of views on the questions which are harassing the world today. The world faces a crisis of the first magnitude.

"If normal life is to be resumed, the world economic conference must be a success. It must not only meet soon but come to its conclusions quickly.

"The task is so complex and difficult that unless it is approached by all nations with the fullest and sincerest desire to arrive at a result, the conference cannot succeed. But the other course before the world is clearly an increase in economic warfare and all nations must co-operate in attempting to avoid this alternative.

PEACE IS NEEDED

"We agree that political tranquility is essential for economic stability; that economic disarmament can take place only in a world in which military disarmament is possible.

"A truce in the field of tariffs and other obstacles to international trade is essential if the conference is to undertake its labors with any hope of success. We are in agreement that a fixed measure of exchange values must be re-established in the world and we believe that this measure must be gold.

"The entire problem of raising world prices and restoring the opportunity to work to the men and women who today wish to work and can find no employment is a unit.

ATTACKED AS UNIT

"It must be attacked as a unit. Along with the measures which must be taken to restore normal conditions in the financial and monetary field, and stability in international exchanges, must go hand in hand measures for removing the obstacles to the flow of international commerce.

"In the period immediately before us, governments must employ such means as are at their disposal to relieve the unemployed by public works, and these efforts of individual governments will achieve their fullest effect if they can be made a part of a synchronized international program.

"Similarly, the central banks of the various nations should, by concerted action, attempt to provide such adequate expansion of credit as may be necessary to support constructive work, avoiding as much as possible the use of credit for illegitimate speculative purposes.

The text of the Roosevelt-Le Breton statement follows:

"The conversations in which we have been engaged had as their purpose the fullest possible exchange of views and ideas between our two countries upon the tasks that confront all countries at the coming economic conference.

"They were inspired by the wish to examine all possible phases of economic and monetary policy which by internationalist action might restore employment, improve prices and the turnover of trade, and aid in the solution of financial and monetary difficulties.

"The conversations have been characterized by the spirit of warm friendship that has long existed between these two countries, and by the quick and friendly understanding of each others minds and spirit which has grown up between the two countries whose history has made us neighbors in mind and feeling.

ECONOMIC DISARMAMENT

"We have joined in the realization that the gradual and simultaneous economic disarmament of the world is imperative and in the restoration of stable monetary conditions. We have surveyed with a close similarity of views and judgment the ways and means of bringing about an increased movement of trade between the two countries and throughout the world.

"These conversations, we believe, will greatly help to forward the common purpose that we have, and to prepare the way for undertakings at the economic conference and the development of the mutual interests of the two countries. In warm friendship we will continue to carry forward this work."

U. S. STARTS ON TRAIL OF TAX DELINQUENTS

Many Face Arrest as Levy Falls Off for the First Quarter of the Current Year

Washington, May 6 (INS)—Hundreds of millions of dollars in income taxes were delinquent today as the Internal Revenue Bureau completed plans for a national collection program which was expected to send many persons to jail.

Despite the practical doubling of income tax rates in the 1932 revenue act, taxes for March and April, the first under the new levies, were $15,000,000 less than in the same months of the year before, when collections were on the basis of the 1928 law.

In order to boost government revenues and punish evaders the special intelligence section of the bureau will employ its agents in all large centers to start investigations.

Early cases in which income tax frauds were suspected already are under investigation. Atty.-Gen. Cummings avowed intention of using all possible federal force against racketeers and gangsters was expected to uncover further tax evasion among this element.

'F. R.' OPPOSES 4-POWER PACT

Paris, May 6 (INS)—President Franklin D. Roosevelt, in conversations with former Premier Edouard Herriot at Washington, expressed disapproval of the four-power European peace project launched by Premier Mussolini of Italy, it was reported here tonight after Herriot had conferred with government officials.

Roosevelt is said to have voiced the fear that the scheme would amount to a dictatorship by Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy that would prove detrimental to the smaller continental powers.

Herriot brought encouraging news from the French standpoint when he informed Premier Daladier that Roosevelt was emphatically in favor of upholding the peace treaties negotiated at Versailles and other post-war pacts.

Vermont Quarries Declare Open Shop

Barre, Vt., May 6 (AP)—Officials of the Wells & Lamson quarry and the Jones Brothers Co. dark quarry announced tonight they would operate henceforth on an open shop basis. Up to the present they have been worked under union agreements.

Officials said that the unanimous rejection by the Quarry Workers' Union of their offer to continue operations on the same basis as last year was the reason for the change.

3 to Face Dedham Murder Trial Juries

Two murder trials are set for the Dedham court calendar, tomorrow, and 35 have been summoned for the jury selections. One of the cases is that of Ahmed Osman and Ali Osman, who will be tried for the murder of five-year-old Helen Kerris of Norwood.

John A. Bowen, 20, and John P. Daley, 19, both of Quincy, will be tried on the charge of slaying Harry "Pop" Ridell, Atlantic baker.

Bogus Priest Quizzed About Missing Boy

Mineola, N. Y., May 6 (AP)—James Gavagan, arrested as a bogus priest in Philadelphia, was virtually freed of suspicion tonight in the murder of 15-year-old Mary Helen O'Connor, but police from neighboring Queens county immediately questioned him concerning the disappearance several weeks ago of the 12-year-old son of Sergt. Michael Gavagan of the Flushing police.

Graf Zeppelin Off for Brazil, 11 Aboard

Friedrichshafen, Germany, May 6 (INS)—The Graf Zeppelin left her hangar here at 8:42 p. m. tonight for Pernambuco, Brazil, carrying 11 passengers on the first transatlantic trip of the 1933 season.

Dr. Hugo Eckener was in command.

FORMER POOL PARTNER SAW OTERI'S DEATH

'Del' Castelone With 'Big Sam' He Admits, but Too Scared to See Who Fired Shots

Admission that he had been with Salvatore "Big Sam" Oteri, alleged "nigger pool" operator, when Oteri was killed at midnight Friday, was made last night, according to police, by Charles "Del" Castelone of Eliot st., Medford.

Castelone, police announced, made the admission after his mother-in-law, Mrs. Emily Botelle of Lynde st., West End, had denied his previous story that he had spent Friday night in her home.

The Medford man is a brother of Charles Castelone, another alleged "nigger pool" operator who was riddled with bullets and killed in almost the same spot in Norman st., West End, last July.

Oteri, who had been a partner of Castelone until less than two months before Castelone was slain, was one of those questioned in connection with the killing.

TOO SCARED TO LOOK

Castelone said he walked into Norman st. with Oteri, but heard the shots which spelt Oteri's death, but that he did not know from where they came.

"I was scared so badly," he said, "that I ran right up to my mother-in-law's and went to bed. They didn't even know I was in there."

Police picked up Castelone and held him as a suspicious person after his car, with the keys still in the ignition switch, had been found in a West End street, where if had been parked all night.

His declared admission last night quelled police fear that a new gangland war had been born through the Oteri killing, with control of the "nigger pool" racket as its objective.

HELD ON SUSPICION

Police had sent out picked details of plainclothes men to the blocking off of any possible resumption of gang warfare.

Castelone was one of six men held by police last night as suspicious persons in connection with the Oteri slaying.

Two women were also questioned yesterday in connection with the Oteri slaying, one the widow of Frederick Voit, "nigger pool" operator of Quincy, and the other a friend, Mrs. Etta Bailey.

Experience Is Great Teacher

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Looks like we got smart when we took a leaf out of the European financial book and gave 'em butter for fat.

Our skidding off the precious metal standard is regarded as an insult by European nations.

It must be doing us good or they wouldn't resent it.

All we know is that we know. Let's take the case of France. They depreciated the franc 80 per cent and paid off on that level.

Then La Belle went back on the gold standard as happy as a bee in a wedding bouquet.

The franc is now five cents instead of 20. And France is better off than any nation. The world has been whipping us to a froth on the rates of exchange.

Never throw in diamonds, when the other boys are betting pellyfies.

Curley Agrees to $800,000 Cut in City Costs

Every Other Arc Light in Boston to Be Dimmed by Slash

Slashes in municipal expenditures, including the extinguishing of every other street light in the city, cut of 8 per cent in department expenses, and aggregating an estimated saving of $800,000 a year, were agreed upon yesterday in a conference between Mayor Curley and heads or representatives of the various municipal departments.

Every department of the city except the police department was represented, according to the Mayor, although Police Commissioner Hultman was sent a formal notice of the meeting and then was further informed of it by telephone.

The Mayor and the conferees decided to extinguish half of the city's 8000 arc lights, beginning June 1, which will mean a saving of about $127,000 for the balance of the year.

An item of $24,000 wanted by police for the purchase of forty new automobiles was scratched, an item of $50,000 for granolithic sidewalks was eliminated, and the items of $25,000 each for upkeep of public buildings, for fuel, and for stationery, postage and supplies, and one of $50,000 that was to go into the reserve fund for accident claims and contingencies—all were crossed off.

In addition, the mayor issued warning to all city employes that a saving of five per cent in expenditures must be made in all departments, some way or other—which would mean a further saving of $435,000 on the basis of his $8,750,000 budget.

If this saving is not evident by next Dec. 15, every city employe will be forced to take a week's vacation without pay, Curley said.

CITIES RELIEF CASH PLEDGED BY ROOSEVELT

Mayors, Headed by Curley, Win President's Support; to Provide R. F. C. Loans

Washington, May 6 (INS)—President Roosevelt has pledged federal aid in the great American cities now, facing financial ruin through depleted public treasuries, it was learned today.

The President has agreed to include in the administration banking reform bill, a section authorizing the cities to borrow for one year from federal reserve banks on tax anticipation warrants.

This will receive such cities as Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Milwaukee, Chicago and many others from their immediate financial plights.

The municipal relief was won by a special committee of Mayors James M. Curley of Boston, T. A. Walmsley of New Orleans, and Daniel W. Hoan of Milwaukee.

These declared the cities were unable to borrow from local banks, that tax collections were in default and that many cities would be unable to pay their police, firemen and other employes after July 1.

2D COSTELLO INDICTMENT TO BE ASKED JURY

Dr. Pomeroy Must Appear at Hearing Tuesday and Tell About Operation on Widow

Peabody, May 6—Another indictment in the mysterious death of William J. Costello, Peabody fireman, will be sought when the grand jury of Essex county meets at Newburyport Tuesday, it was learned here tonight.

Testimony on an operation performed last fall on Mrs. Costello by Dr. Harris S. Pomeroy, her family physician, and another doctor will be heard, it was said. Two nurses on the staff of the J. H. Thomas hospital in Peabody will probably appear as witnesses.

"Maybe"

John F. Sullivan, superintendent of the hospital, however, has been summoned to appear and will bring all records of the institution.

Other witnesses will be Patrolman Edward J. McMahon, Andrew J. Fyfe, Jr., and Dr. John Walsh.

The vital organs of Capt. Costello were turned over to City Chemist George Belling, of Brockton, last night. Belling had been retained by defense counsel.

More Golfers Lug Clubs as 50 Join Caddy Strike

Whether it's the balmy May weather or the depression, the golf fever among caddies of Bay State country clubs spread yesterday to exclusive Vesper Country Club, located on Tying's Island in the Merrimac river near Lowell.

Fifty caddies there walked out and notified Caddy Master Leslie Marinel that they were through until an increase in wages was forthcoming. The caddies threw up a picket line at the club entrance, emblazoned with vivid home-made banners.

Last year the Vesper Club boys received $1 a round. This year they are getting 75 cents a round, with a nickel deducted for insurance. They want the old scale back.

At the exclusive Salem Country Club where the ranks of 300 striking caddies are holding firm, wealthy members today will be forced to carry their own clubs.

Many of the influential members are journeying to neighboring clubs to enjoy their golf rather than burden themselves with their clubs, as the youthful strikers remain away and refuse to arbitrate.

Picket lines also are being maintained here and the last of the strike-breakers imported from Arlington and Winchester have departed.

NORWOOD MANAGER CHARGES OUSTER PLOT BY UNSEEN FOE

Charges that an invisible government is behind the move to oust him so it can gain control of Norwood for its own political benefit, were made yesterday by Town Manager Clarence A. Bingham, who has been suspended by the board of selectmen and now faces removal.

Bingham asserts that a well-known politician who formerly was wealthy is his chief enemy.

The town-manager's friends say that with Bingham out, politics will be "in," with an end to business-like handling of the town's affairs.

With politicians in control and their satellites and friends in office, veteran employes will be fired and municipal contracts will be handled to suit those in control. All this according to Bingham.

Bingham states that his foes are out to get him by "framing him," because he refused to be dictated to or turn over the reins of government to them.

BINGHAM WAS OUSTED

He was suspended April 15 by three of the five members who compose the board of selectmen. They were Peter J. Feeney, chairman; Harry R. Butters, Daniel Collins. The other two, John M. Mutch and Eugene L. Murphy, remained loyal to Bingham. Feeney took over temporarily the duties of the ousted official.

In accordance with his privilege under the town charter, Bingham asked for a hearing and it was granted.

He had requested a public hearing, but this the board refused holding a session, instead, from which the press was barred. There have been three sessions so far and the last, which extended until after midnight Thursday night, was continued to May 12.

"I am going to fight this case to a finish," Bingham declared last night. "I've done nothing that warrants my resigning. In fact I am proud of everything I have done."

The nine specific charges on which Bingham's removal is sought "for the best interests of the town" as made public by the selectmen are:

Lack of desired and necessary co-operation; for failing and refusing to advertise for bids on contracts; for using for business and personal purposes auto number plates only to be used by officials of the police force on police business, and for not controlling and supervising the police department in a manner to obtain the respect and confidence of the members and prompt and efficient conduct of the force.

It is also charged that Bingham's assistance, desirable and necessary for the proper conduct of his office, has been greatly diminished, and that a more economical regime can be secured by a change in the office of town manager.

COLLINS AN ENEMY

At one of the sessions, Bingham answered all charges in a lengthy address.

Yesterday the town manager charged that Selectman Collins is one of the men responsible for the move to dismiss him from office.

"Collins, since assuming office, repeatedly has interfered with the operating details of the town and has overstepped the authority of his office, which is outlined in the town charter," said Bingham.

"I incurred Collins' enmity because I refused to give his daughter, Theresa, a town job as stenographer, and because I refused to remove a hydrant from in front of his house on Summit ave. That would have cost $100.

"He went to Supt. Joseph E. Conley of the public works department and tried to get jobs for friends. Collins has broken down the morale of city employes. His great expression is 'I have the authority,' he says.

Selectman Collins denied all these charges when they were called to his attention.

"My daughter Theresa was employed by the town as a stenographer and was laid off," Collins said. "I simply asked Bingham if he couldn't put her back. There is sickness in my family and we needed her aid.

"In my position as president of the Norwood Central Labor Union, it was my official duty to try to get jobs for the unemployed members. I attempted to aid not only my friends but those I didn't know.

"LET THE PEOPLE RULE"

"As to that hydrant, I only asked what any citizen would ask, Bingham, in my opinion, did not live up to the by-laws which govern his job. My career is an open book.

"I made up my mind when running for office that I would bring back the rulership of Norwood to its people. I am carrying out my promise to date. I never favored an outsider coming here to run us. There are enough clever citizens here to run the town without going to Elizabeth, N. J., to get one."

At the Friday night session, the records of which were not made public, an affidavit, allegedly made by Louis R. McBay, former Norwood high school teacher, containing the center of interest.

In this affidavit, McBay alleges that in a conversation with Collins at which several others were present, Collins told him.

"We've got Bingham now, right where we want him. We have nothing on him yet, but there must be something wrong when the town manager suggests a cut in his own salary. He must be doing something crooked. We have nothing definite yet, but we will get plenty on him. And if we don't have enough, we can make up plenty."

Collins yesterday denied he had made that statement to McBay, and asserted it was a move by Bingham and his friends to boost the town manager's stock.

Meanwhile the affair has created a stir among the 6600 voters and divided them into factions. Rumors that plans were under way to recall sundry selectmen were widespread.

Bingham is 44, married and has three children. He was named town manager in March, 1928, after serving as city manager at Waltham, Watertown, N. Y., Lima, O., and West Palm Beach, Fla.

America Loses

the matter. Even its democratic members indicated a desire to postpone action, in which promptness was so imperatively required, until the new administration should come into power.

THE SPECIAL SESSION of Congress, which met almost simultaneously with the inauguration of the new President, has thus far given the impression that the great program of Pan-American reciprocity has never dawned upon its consciousness.

It seems to have yielded itself up completely to the lotus dream of Secretary Hull that we are approaching a point when all tariff barriers in the world will be dissolved by mutual agreement among the nations.

England, not content with the advantages that she has astutely won through agreements with her dominions for imperial preference and the exclusion of all non-British goods from British markets, has now taken advantage of America's negligence and supineness and is proceeding to annex Pan-American reciprocity to the British program of the Ottawa preferences.

THE dispatches report the conclusion of agreements with Argentina not only for the exchange of goods on a mutually advantageous basis, but for the control of Argentine credits and currency exchange, to an extent that practically gives Great Britain control of Argentina's purchasing power. She has concluded similar trade and tariff conventions with Denmark and Germany and is pursuing negotiations to the same end with every other country which she finds it possible to bring within the reach of her so-called "trade treaty drive."

Meanwhile we do NOTHING.

Secretary Hull is reported as saying of the Anglo-Argentine agreement that he has not studied it closely.

His view is that it serves merely to illustrate what he regards almost as a proprietary formula, that the only approach to the economic problems of the world is by "some comprehensive, remedial plan."

THIS IS LITTLE more than a platitude, and an empty one.

Against it might be cited the reported opinion of banking and financial circles in Buenos Aires that the British agreement is a heavy blow to American trade with the Argentine and will result in a great increase of British importations.

Such are the penalties to be paid for Secretary Hull's antiquated policies and visionary theories.

And as a consequence AMERICA LOSES.

Boston Teachers to Receive Pay Monday

Just 10 days late, Boston's 5300 school teachers will receive their April pay tomorrow, when approximately $1,000,000 will flow out of the city treasury into their purses and wallets.

The delay was caused, according to City Treas. Dolan, by the fact that the school department did not start making up its list under the reduced salary scale until after April 21, with the result that the payroll was received late by the city treasurer's office.

COLLEGE PICKS OUT ITS BEST

The search for the ideal girl and boy who could measure up to the standard prescribed by the co-eds and male students at Boston University ended yesterday when two of the collegiates—Cynthia Laraway, 20, and Tom Hardy, 21—were chosen for the honor.

Scores of prospective aspirants were considered by the selection committee, and the winners were awarded the laurel wreath with cheers.

The type of ideal girl laid down by the male contingents had to be plump, a good sport, and not too shy. She was required to be a good dancer and able to outlast her slimmer sister who goes on diets to get that sylph-like figure.

As for the modern Apollo, the coeds ruled that he must be young, well-formed, tall, have dark locks and radiant eyes—in a word, a real movie type.

The winners measured up to the standards in every detail, and won hands down.

Miss Laraway lives in Main st., Winchester. She is a senior honor student and a member of the dean's cabinet. She is five feet four in height, pretty, a brunete with flashing dark eyes. She is not slim, nor is she fat. She is plump, but carries no excess weight.

According to the judges, Miss Laraway is an excellent dancer and can foxtrot for hours without tiring. She is a favorite because of her personality. She is unassuming and wears simple clothes, detesting fads.

Young Hardy also fills the bill to the last letter. He could step into the movies and give the screen heroes a run tomorrow, his pals say. He is vice-president of the senior class, president of the Seabird and Blue Key Society, captain in the R. O. T. C.

He is six feet tall, an Adonis in proportion, and has black, curly hair, dancing eyes and white teeth. And he has "it." He does not have taupe, false teeth, glass eyes and wooden legs. These accessories were barred.

Big Vote Seen on Repeal Issue June 13

More than 2,000,000 ballots will be distributed by the state cities and towns for the election of delegates to the Constitutional Convention for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment on June 13 next.

Under the law Secretary of State Fred W. Cook is required to print 60 ballots for each 50 voters. The election expense to the cities and towns, it is estimated, will be about $170,000, mostly in pay to election officials.

tory children were compelled to hide on fire escapes and in cellars when factory inspectors appeared, and will ask especially why the "inspectors" did not inspect the fire escapes.

The governor will investigate particularly a charge that 15-year-old girls were "invited for week-end trips with their employers under threat of losing their jobs." That might interest the federal authorities.

On this train is Col. Frank B. Shutts, publisher and owner of the Miami Herald, who wishes you to know and tell the world that in the last six months more than 7,000,000 automobiles entered Dade County, of which Miami is the metropolis. 265,000 of them came from other states. All brought spending money.

More automobiles and spending money will come if Florida's able Governor Sholtz and his Legislature will make this announcement: "The first 100,000 citizens from other states that establish homesteads and build dwellings costing not more than $8000 for land and buildings and take up their residence in Florida will pay no taxes or assessments on such homesteads as long as they live."

And that applies not only to Florida, but to California, New Jersey and other states.

If Florida passed that law there would soon be added to its population 100,000 families drawing army, navy, police, public school and other pensions, averaging at least $1000 annually.

That would mean $500,000,000 invested in land and new homes, and the spending within the state of 100 millions in new money every year.

It requires no Newton to calculate that this spending would be good for the state and more than offset failure to collect taxes, on the new houses especially as the homes do not now exist.

The suits are to recover on promissory notes held by the bank, with Judge Logan an alleged debtor in the sum of $49,850 on a note for $25,000 dated October 31, 1929.

Boston Romances Blighted by Boy's Mail Box Looting

A 17-year-old boy, taken into custody yesterday by police, admitted he may be the indirect cause of many a blighted romance throughout the city.

Charged with stealing letters from mail boxes in homes, he revealed that whenever he came across love letters—and there were several—he would read the sentimental contents, smile and then throw the letters away. He confessed ransacking 25 mail boxes.

The boy is James Torici, claiming to live with his brother at a West Newton st. address. Six weeks ago he escaped from the Lyman School for Boys, where he had been sent for delinquency.

His letter racket was unique. After stealing letters with bank checks he would call upon persons for whom the mail was intended, announcing that he was a messenger from the bank and that there was a service charge for delivery. Returning with $37 and $26 checks yesterday to Prosper Chapel, of 63 Waltham st., proved his undoing and he was taken in tow by Special Officers Coleman Morrison and John J. Sullivan of Station 4.

He also told police that on one occasion he stole a pocketbook at St. Mary's Church, afterwards felt that it was a mistake and never repeated this type of larceny.

Young Torici declared to the officers that both his parents died while he was hardly more than a baby and, in tears, said:

"If my father and mother were alive today this would never have happened."

Torici claimed that at Lyman School he was farmed out to work from 3 a. m. to 7 p. m. for 90 cents a day and that if he was returned to the farm job he "would escape again."

He will be arraigned in court tomorrow.

HEALTH FUND SLASH OPPOSED

Mayor Curley last night made public two communications protesting against the recent suggestion of the Boston Finance Commission that health activities be curtailed in this city and that a saving of 10 per cent in expenditures, amounting to about $75,000, be effected this year.

The protests were received from Dr. John W. Bartol, president of the Boston Health League, Inc., and from Dr. John O. Egan, prominent Dorchester dentist and president of the Guild of St. Apollonia, an organization of 275 dentists of the Roman Catholic faith who care for the parochial school children of the archdiocese.

Dr. Egan wrote that the proposed closing of the dental branches of the George Robert White fund units would be most unfair to the children of the city, and Dr. Bartol stated that money wisely expended for the prevention of disease results in a substantial saving in the future that would be necessary if health program were curtailed.

Emergency Drive to Be Opened May 15

The official opening of the renewed campaign of the Boston Emergency Campaign will take place May 15, according to the announcement made from Campaign headquarters last night.

All committees will begin concerted activities this week preparatory to the opening. Distribution of pledge cards will be made at the same time. The renewed drive is for an additional $1,000,000.

BILL PROVIDES 3 MILLION JOBS

Defense, but Mr. Rand said today the committee now had approved the plan for putting men back to work and manufacturers over the country were being notified of the action.

"This legislation, if approved, would be the greatest step forward for industry in the last 40 years," said Rand, predicting the manufacturers of the country would stand back of the committee's action.

The bill is being drafted by friends of the administration headed by Senator Wagner, of New York, and its supporters are hopeful the Chief Executive will approve the measure so the legislation may be introduced at this session of Congress. Mr. Roosevelt as yet, however, has not viewed even an outline of the proposals.

One of the points to be cleared up in the program is how the new set-up would be administered. The administration in other similar matters, including the railroad bill, has leaned toward a single directing head or co-ordinator. Some members of the committee, however, favor a separate agency composed of perhaps five men, intimate with the problems of industry.

WOULD PROTECT LABOR

Upon this agency would fall the responsibility for approving agreements within the various major industries, including steel, textiles, mining and the like, and for watching over operation of the laws so that in any relaxing of the Sherman and Clayton acts there would be no monopolies created or violation of the rights of labor.

Under it, instead of minimum wage scales for the entire country, each industry would be enabled to fix its own minimum wage, fix working hours and otherwise act to prevent cut-throat competition and "sweatshops."

The entire program is envisioned as tying in with the government's public works program on such a huge scale that buying power would be quickly restored and the wheels of factories started turning again.

$3,000,000 in Beer Tax Paid in N. Y.

New York, May 6—From New York city alone in the first 30 days since 3.2 per cent beer an wine became legal, April 7, an estimated total of $3,000,000 in taxes and fees has been collected by city, state and federal governments.

Of the $3,000,000 about $2,099,150 went into the federal coffers. The state received $365,750 and the city $526,950.

Moscow, May 6 (AP)—Germany and Russia have signed an indefinite extension of their conciliation treaty of 1929 and non-aggression pact of 1926.

At Rome, Premier Mussolini and the Russian commercial representative, Rosengoltz, today signed two accords, the first embracing customs questions, the second dealing with commercial interchange.

INTERNATIONALISM IMPERILS U. S. INDUSTRY, SAYS DONHAM

By WALLACE B. DONHAM

Dean of the Graduate School of Business Administration, Harvard University, and One of America's Outstanding Economists.

In an address delivered at the Wharton Alumni Institute, Philadelphia; reprinted from the Harvard Business Review of April, 1933.

I AM not an Internationalist in the current meaning and implication of that term . . . I believe the road to prosperity in the years ahead lies in making this great nation so far as possible self-sufficient, maintaining a proper balance between agriculture, mining and manufacturing and supplying its own wants. . . . . .

We must slow down the processes by which we attempt to secure international agreements. . . . . .

We cannot ignore the fierce competition which will be a necessary corollary if we keep increasing this economic interdependence. Nor can we ignore the probability that restoration of international trade to the 1929 volume is impossible and even if possible of doubtful value in solving domestic problems. . . . . .

Wallace B. Donham

Our primary obligation is to put our own national house in order and by restoring our own balance to reestablish our great social groups. By so doing we shall make our best contribution to a sane and realistic internationalism.

But in advocating these things today I become almost outcast intellectually and morally.

Hundreds of economists in vast encyclicals state the true gospel. I am a dissenter.

The president of a great university calls continually for policies that I believe dangerous. . . . . .

A HOST of intelligent and idealistic men and women, in spite of the disillusionment of the last fifteen years, still believe the only way to prevent another world war is the road of international co-operation leading to gradual creation of a superstate.

These lend their powerful support to current theories. I think this the one sure road to another world war.

Great exporters of mass production goods wishing to regain their briefly held foreign markets join the chorus. I believe Europe will not allow us . . . to maintain for ourselves virtual monopoly of the most profitable and civilizing industries. They now thwart our efforts by suitable tariffs.

Great bankers with large investments abroad still think of these investments in terms of their nominal value and perhaps still desire to take from England banking leadership of the world. By their skill and adroitness they stimulate mass psychologies that lead us toward policies designed to such ends. I believe that from the nature of our national economy, we cannot be bankers to the world.

FORTUNATELY, not all groups accept extreme internationalism.

Labor is disturbed, as I am, because our national standards of living and employment are threatened more and more by the reduced effectiveness of our tariffs, caused by depreciation of foreign currencies and appreciation of our own.

Thoughtful manufacturers in many small industries hesitate to make plans. They fear Congress may yield to the pressure of internationalism, reduce tariffs and ruin what is left of their markets. . . . . .

A few lonely students of economics think we should explore the possibility of a high degree of self-sufficiency as an alternative of internationalism. But these groups are overborne by the clamor of seeming authority and the general public is impressed by warnings constantly repeated that such views are narrow-minded, materialistic and stultifying. . . . . .

To me, the road to freedom from world wars and to prosperity lies in working out most problems at home. In this way we may reduce the necessity of international co-operation to a minimum within the capacity of human nature and remove most causes of friction. . . . . .

We cannot look simultaneously at home and abroad for solution of our difficulties. Policies adapted to one field too frequently oppose needs in the other. Continued attempts to straddle will almost surely not accomplish constructive results. We must choose where to direct our energies.

TRADE restriction policies adapted to our home problem of stability are inconsistent with the widely expressed desire for removal of trade barriers.

Higher prices, in this country essential to securing a proper balance between debts and values and to stabilizing our farmers and home owners, would in themselves be new trade barriers on the export side and would compel new trade barriers against imports if we are to avoid destructive competition for many industrial groups. The need of all our people for higher prices at home is inconsistent with the desire of part of our people to export manufactured goods. Adequate home buying power can only result from high real wages and from a price level related to our debts.

This is inconsistent with the compelling necessity of low wages and prices if we are to seek our future in the international markets.

Shall we prefer high general standards at home, as we have in the past, or set up social forces strengthening the pressure for low wages?

Mass production can thrive only on widespread buying power. . . .

From our own standpoint, as the most self-contained of nations, the minimum of imports required to obtain essential raw materials is a necessary corollary of industrialization, but this can readily be secured in exchange for those home products which must be exported. It should not be secured by methods which unstabilize great groups of workers.

Within such limits industrialization can be maintained without foreign trade. . . . . .

OUR principal economic problem is no longer capacity to produce. The halt in production which now threatens our whole social structure is not a halt proceeding from lack of capacity to produce, nor will it be.

Our problem is to restore the buying power of our people on whom always 80 per cent of our market depended. A solution of this problem will not condemn us to lower standards of living, longer hours of labor and loss of leisure and comfort. Rather is the reverse true in every way.

Our only hope of continuous benefit from technological progress is in higher standards of living, shorter hours of labor, great security both in maturity and old age and more of leisure and comfort. By the sane handling of our domestic problems all these can be attained.

In my view not only can relative self-containment be the solution of our problem of depression, but it is the ONLY POSSIBLE solution.

The course we now pursue requires neglect of our domestic problems, a wholly improbable degree of international co-operation, great social readjustments at home, and periods of time for its attainment within which our social structure may disintegrate.

Tech Parades Wonders--Even Nose Shine Meter at Annual Open House

GIRLS WHO VISIT M. I. T. really can't be too careful about shiney noses as the engineers now have a device that measures the gloss. It was demonstrated at yesterday's Opera House by Miss Edith Baker and Martin Devine of the electrical measurements department. (Boston Sunday Advertiser Photo.)

The wonders of science—including the wonder at why a student will fight for a free book and become covered with oil and beer!—of his shirt, or trousers, or both, in the process, were exhibited yesterday during the 10th Open House at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

More than 25,000 persons attended the Open House and viewed the many exhibits, including those which go to make up a panorama of student life during one day.

There were steam engines, water wheels, a miniature railroad system with the trains running without visible human control, a model sewage disposal plant, a working model of Cape Cod Canal, a model rubber plantation in operation—these and many others, but the exhibit which attracted the women was a machine to measure the shine on a lady's nose.

THE CELL DOES IT

Partly it is done with mirrors, but it's not as simple as that, as shown by a demonstration with Miss Edith Baker as the model and Martin Devine of the Technology electrical measurements department.

Miss Baker, who is very careful indeed about her nose shine, sat down before the apparatus, without having resorted to any last-minute powdering, and an electric light bulb just beyond her right shoulder was snapped on.

Instantly—such are the marvels of science—what shine there was on her nose became enamored of a light ray and a photo-electric cell, and the various what-nots and gimeracks of this startling machine.

The shine on her nose slipped through a hole in a photo-electric cell, broke a relay or something, bounced over to reflectors, darted up to a gadget called a gravelometer and then pinged in a straight line over to a scale and was instantly measured on the scale.

THEY STOP TIME

Photographs were taken, showing the wink of an eye, the darting out and back of a snake's tongue, and other almost-lightning movements that call for photographs at the rate of 4000 a second, with exposures ranging from one-one-hundred thousandth to one-five hundred thousandths of a second.

There were countless other exhibits, marvelous to the layman, but the most exciting feature of the day was the annual Tech rush to secure free copies of Technique, the undergraduate yearbook.

Over an oil-drenched hut erected in the center of Tech field the undergraduates swarmed in battle to win one or more of the 10 paddles thrust up through the roof and each entitling the captor to a copy of the yearbook. Shirts were ripped off in the process, trousers vanished, bruises and a few claret-streaming noses appeared as the watching throng cheered on the oil-covered rushers.

N. E. Postal Receipts Show Gain for April

Postal receipts in Boston during the month of April showed a decided pickup over the corresponding month of a year ago, with a gain of $1,206,435 or 1.01 per cent, the Postoffice Department announced yesterday.

Four other New England cities, out of a selected list of 30 municipalities throughout the country, showed increases: Springfield, $98,719 or 4.85 per cent; Worcester, $81,706 or 1.56 per cent; Providence, $153,629 or 2.92 per cent, and Hartford, $183,105 or 3.6 per cent. New Haven was the only city in New England to report a loss.

Hangs Up Washing Without Pins or Props

A Chicago man has patented an amazing new kind of clothesline that requires neither pins nor props yet will hold the daintiest handkerchief or heaviest blanket so securely that the strongest gale cannot wrench them loose. Then with the mere touch of a finger they can be taken down instantly. It cannot stretch, sag, snap in two, tear or stain the most delicate fabrics, and holds twice as many clothes as other lines of equal length. Washings are hung up and taken down in one-third the usual time. To quickly introduce this remarkable invention, a guaranteed trial and special wholesale price offer is being made to everyone who reads this announcement. Just write a letter or postal to the Price Manufacturing Co., Suite 613, 154 East Erie St., Chicago, Ill., and say "I want to try your wonderful new Pinless Clothesline." They also want agents. First Lady to Go as Mrs. Hearst's Guest to Big Ball

Washington, May 6 (INS)—Mrs. Roosevelt today accepted the invitation extended by Mrs. William Randolph Hearst to attend a charity ball to be given in the Seventh Regiment Armory, New York, on May 22.

Proceeds of the affairs will be applied to the support of two canteens for rest rooms which Mrs. Roosevelt opened in January for the use of unemployed girls.

Up to inauguration, Mrs. Roosevelt had contributed the proceeds of her radio addresses to maintenance of these rest rooms, but since March 4 she has not been on the air.

Because additional funds were needed, Mrs. Hearst sponsored the ball and Mrs. Roosevelt promptly agreed to lend her presence.

2500 IN SALEM STRIKE MONDAY

Salem, May 6.—Two thousand employes of the Prequot mill here and 500 employes of the Peabody bleachery in Peabody, attached to the mill, today, after all-day balloting, voted to go on strike Monday. The majority of the workers are girls and women.

The workers' grievance is the extra-work plan which they say would eliminate 200 hands. The employes are members of Textile Union No 33, whose president, John P. O'Connell, was lustily booed when he spoke against a strike vote at the Thursday meeting of the organization.

300,000 BUY AT 'HOUGHTON DAY'

A record day's business was chalked up at "Greater Houghton Day" sale yesterday.

From 9 a. m. to 9 p. m., opening and closing hours of the store, more than 300,000 people took advantage of the exceptional values offered, it was conservatively estimated. The record turnout was thus justified the stand taken by Houghton's that when there is real value people will buy and big paper space was used by Houghton's to advertise this semi-annual sale. In the Boston Evening American 14 solid pages displayed some of the bargains for all New England to see. Two thousand extra clerks were employed to augment the large staff of employes for the event.

An hour before the big store doors were opened by Mayor Curley a large crowd had gathered and mounted police were pressed into service to protect them from passing traffic. The sidewalks were packed solid by the eager bargain seekers.

In the store, 14 police officers assisted in handling the crowds after the doors were opened.

3 R's Hold Sway in Scituate; No School Holidays

Saturday Just Another Class Day There by the Pupils' Own Vote

While the juvenile school population of the rest of the state yesterday staged May parties or went fishing or played baseball, the youth of Scituate nobly trudged down to the little red schoolhouse for more readin', ritin' and 'rithmatic.

It was the first time in the history of the town that Saturday school classes were held, decided as a result of the pupils' own vote to sessions on Saturdays and thus make possible an earlier school closing in June.

Out of a total of 320 senior and junior high pupils who voted to cram in knowledge on Saturdays, only 15 went back on their "precelection" promises and failed to put in appearance yesterday.

Maybe it was force of habit, though, in having no school on Saturdays, or maybe the absentees felt just a little poorly on a fine May morning, the school authorities were charitably inclined to believe.

Principal A. Russell Cole was pleased, if not surprised, at the fine attendance and topped off the day with a baseball game in the afternoon.

Again next Saturday, Scituate students plan to prove their loyalty to the cause of education and go to classes—for the second and last time. Meanwhile, individual student committees may visit the missing 15 to discover why any Scituate boy or girl would be so unwise as to want to stay away from school on Saturday.

'Love-Shy' Debs Chide Young Harvard Critic

MISS MABEL PETERS of West Newton, who replies to Harvard critic of debs and sub debs by saying that the girls are not to blame. "It is their parents' fault," she adds. (Sunday Advertiser Photo.)

From the viewpoint of a Boston sub-deb, F. E. Sweetser, self-appointed Harvard freshman critic of debs and sub-debs, must be "awfully young," and from the viewpoint of a full deb—well, it's all the parents' fault if the girls seem repressed to Harvard men.

The inmates of the social register made their answers yesterday to young Mr. Sweetser who, in the new Harvard Critic, a publication backed by 10 Harvard boys, declared that Boston sub-debs are dull, cannot dance, in matters of love are helpless and in dress unfortunate.

Pretty Priscilla Phelan, subdebutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James J. Phelan of Brookline, placed the characterization of "awfully young" on the brash Harvard freshman.

Debs Don't Care

"You know," she said, "if a boy doesn't make a good impression on a girl she isn't going to waste time playing up to him. Nor are we debs going to care a lot if some freshman over at Harvard says all the Boston sub-debs are suppressed types, are funny looking on the dance floor and are afraid of love. Ridiculous!

"I don't believe he has been around a whole lot. At his age, how can he pose as an authority on debs in love? His statement, 'in all matters of love, she is helpless,' is just too silly.

"As far as our looking better debutantes and sub-debs one meets at affairs look smarter in evening things. Being modern, we naturally dance well. And just because a girl is a sub-deb doesn't mean she isn't twice as good a dancer as any Harvard freshman."

Miss Maybel Peters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Edwin Peters of 178 Prince st., West Newton, and a student at Erskine College on Beacon Hill, made her debut this year and she blames whatever faults may be found in the girls directly on their parents.

Lack Individuality

"Many debs I know travel instead of finishing school," she said. "Some haven't even finished high school studies. Perhaps that's why their small talk is so dull to the boys.

"It's not really the girls' fault. They are taken out of school at 15, or a little older, and are all muddled up with lots of social this and thats. Many of them, after several years of social gayety, have completely taken a flop because they lack individuality.

"I can appreciate Sweetser's viewpoint in panning some of us, but we debs should laugh in the face of an article written as the Suppressed Sub-Deb is. He is taking an awful lot for granted by saying that all debs are poor dancers as a group and dress unbecomingly.

"Debs suppressed? I suppose that means emotionally. I think it's an awfully strong word to use. Until a sub-deb comes out, has been a deb awhile, she could hardly be said to have had a chance to be suppressed."

A bit feebly after all this barrage, young Sweetser added somewhat yesterday to his original observations in the Harvard Critic by declaring that the views expressed in the article are not his alone but by many boys in his freshman class.

"I can't understand why the debbies don't take it in a better spirit," he said.

LOWELL MAYOR AVERTS RIOTING

Lowell, May 6—A street riot by 5000 strikers and strike-breakers was averted today by Mayor Charles H. Slowey when he sped to the scene of the ugly gathering and in a vigorous speech convinced the mob against violence.

The near-riot followed announcement of Beckler Brothers that they planned to abandon their shoe factory, one of a number where help walked out four weeks ago. The factory has been manned by strike-breakers from Boston. Strikers planned revenge on the strike-breakers and gathered to resort to violence only to find out that the men driven in from Boston each day had tired of the work and failed to appear.

It was then suggested that the autos used to haul the men and the factory be assailed. Police got word to the mayor, who prevented a riot.

Following the mayor's speech, which was received first with growls, then cheers, word was given out that the United Novelty Shoe Co., employing 600 hands in normal times, would close and move their business out of Lowell.

Bungle Holdup, Suspects Held in Crime Farce

A bungled holdup, a policeman, a telephone bell ringing, a fainting woman—and a wife who didn't know the caller—all worked last night to solve, according to police, an attempted payroll holdup in Charlestown, within a few hours after the attempt was made.

As a result of all the "breaks," police last night had in custody Charles Hoffman, 34, of Alexander st., Dorchester, and Samuel Cooper of Jersey st., Back Bay.

Frederick J. Campbell of 4 Salem st., Charlestown, was driving a payroll truck of the A. Towle Co. of 135 High st., when three men in an auto forced the truck to the curb at Rutherford ave. and Washington st., Charlestown, and demanded the money.

Then Motorcycle Officer John J. Marrinch ran into the holdup. The two men leaped into their machine and one of the three then in the car fired a shot at the officer. Marrinch fired once.

The sedan sped to Prison Point bridge and Marrinch was thrown from his motorcycle.

Later Patrolman, McManus arrested Hoffman.

Sergt. John Miller of Charlestown went to question Hoffman's wife. The telephone rang. Mrs. Hoffman answered, exclaimed, "He's been arrested?" and fainted.

The sergeant picked up the receiver and from his conversation with a woman on the other end went to Jersey st., where he arrested Cooper.

500-Million Fund Urged for Highways

Washington, May 6 (AP)—A $500,000,000 emergency highway program for this year, to be financed by a federal public works bond issue, was advocated today by the National Association of State Highway officials.

WEYMOUTH PAIR BLAMED IN FIRES

Forest fires which have swept across the Cape within the last week were blamed last night on two Weymouth firebugs and warrants will be issued today for their arrest.

Eleven fires in one day, Friday, are said to have been started by the pair. One, a fire set in rubbish in Price's block, Washington sq., threatened the business district.

Last night a brush fire which started in the Manomet section of Plymouth was still burning 36 hours after it got under way. State fire fighters expected to head it off at Great Pond, outside Ellisville.

Three years ago a fire burned out a great section in the vicinity and fire fighters were concerned last night about the blaze eating up the second or scrub growth of timber.

Fire which swept over a seven mile front at Rochester, Wareham, Merriman and Tremont Friday was under control last night after three abandoned shops had been destroyed in the rear of the Tremont railroad depot.

Very Few Cubans Know Their Country Faces Absolute Ruin, Says Karl Decker

'BUTCHERIES OF GEN. WEYLER TAME BESIDE THOSE TODAY'

"It Is Impossible to Estimate Closely the Number of Students That Have Been Killed by the Machado Police, and Without a Sign of Trials"

This is the fourth and concluding article by Karl Decker on the terrorist campaign in Cuba by insurrectionists against the Machado regime.

This series has been a remarkable expose of the present struggle of the young students of the secret ABC organization against the Machado killers, furnishing a vivid background story of present-day conditions.

Karl Decker, the author, won international acclaim for his expose of Spanish brutalities in Cuba preceding the Spanish-American War.

By KARL DECKER

Reporter, War Correspondent and Soldier of Fortune

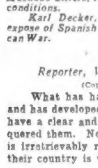
(Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.)

What has happened to Cuba has come about so gradually and has developed so slowly and inevitably that few in the island have a clear and complete realisation of the fate that has conquered them. No American in Cuba will admit that the country is irretrievably ruined. A few, a very few Cubans, know that their country is without hope of redemption.

"A Cuban today is a tenant in his own home," said Don Raimundo.

Don Raimundo is old and wise. I have known him for many years and the story of Don Raimundo and his family would be the story of Cuba.

We sat at a perfect spring afternoon a short time ago at a table before the Hotel Pasaje. It was both cheerful, more Parisian than Paris and there was nothing in sight to chill the happiness of the tourist.



Karl Decker

I had known that spot in the days when there was a Spanish flag in sight on every building when the "Alerta" could be heard from arsenals and barracks shouting Spaniards' bugle calls throughout the day and the shuffling of marching feet as regiments of Spanish army passed along the prado.

Havana in those days was unclean and unhealthy with the dead carts rolling along each morning filled with the bodies of victims of yellow fever to be dumped into the sea at the Punta.

I had watched the blind, wasteful, drunken spending of money throughout the city and throughout the island.

In Hands of Cubans

I was in Havana when the crash came and sugar dropped to the bottom, and had seen Cuba climb back gradually but a Cuba in which a dire change had occurred: a Cuba that had lost its birthright. From that year, 1920, Cuba began to develop into a tenant farmer in his own land.

"Life under the Spaniard was hell. We had no rights. No Cuban could hold government office. They taxed us heavily and we had no representation. We had nothing but money.

"We had nothing but the fat red land and the fat black land and the sugar mills and the tobacco vegas. The Spaniards had everything else. The trade was all in their hands.

"They lent us money, too. Usually at 8 per cent a month. Fortunately we always were able to take up our loans when the crop was sold.

"But all the sources of wealth in Cuba were in the hands of Cubans," said Don Raimundo, and his long, thin, blue-veined hands shook as he raised his daiquori to his lips. "We owned the fat red land the fat black land. We owned the sugar cane and the mills. A few centrales were owned by Americans, by Atkins, the McCullough, the Fowlers, but they were not our rivals—they were our friends.

"You remember the first time you honored me by coming to my Hacienda, Don Carlos, years and years ago. The first year of the revolution. I had a hundred horses in my corrales and thousands of cattle upon my potreros, and it was a day's ride, a 24 hours' ride, around my acres.

"Today," said Don Raimundo, "on per cent of the cultivable land in Cuba belongs to foreigners; the fat red land and the fat black land; the great tobacco vegas as well as the canefields. The greater part of the other 10 per cent is under mortgage to foreigners.

Taxes Are Heavier

"The Cuban has his liberty, however. He no longer pays taxes to Spain even if the taxes he pays to support his own government are heavier than he ever paid to Spain. That bootblack over yonder pays $52 every six months, if he can get it. That Chinaman with his baskets slung across his shoulders pays a dollar a day. It may not be a legally imposed tax but he pays it. Every wheel that turns pays a tax.

"This is the only one of the big hotels that were here when you first came to Cuba that is still in. The Ynglaterra and the Telegrafo have closed their doors. The Spaniards have been beaten even in trade in Cuba. But the Americans have suffered as well. The Sevilla-Biltmore, Havana's finest hotel just two years ago, has been closed for two years. Scores of others have died or are dying. The whole country is moribundo."

"The Spaniards and the French have nearly all deserted us and the branch shops of American firms have gone," said Don Raimundo when I talked of Obispo street. "It is not what it was when the Spanish were here. Then we Cubans had fortunes to spend and spent them. Cuba was the world's sugar bowl and it made us rich.

"But now Cuba has her liberty. We are free from the thrall of the infamous Spaniard and his frightful cruelties. Do you remember the shark-chula in Cabanas? They would starve a Cuban, hold him incommunicado for a time and then his body, torn by sharks, would be found in the harbor."

The old Cuban seemed honest-ly indignant and any one sitting near would have felt like shrieking "Viva Cuba libre!"

"And Wexler used to hold Cubans incommunicado," said Don Raimundo, "How the American newspapers used to scream about that."

In Secret Prisons

Today Cuban prisoners are held "at the disposition of the President."

Relatives and friends are not only not permitted to communicate with them, but are not permitted to know where they are imprisoned.

"Do you remember, Don Carlos, the Ley de Fuga? What infamy! What satire! The law of flight! A guardia civil was policeman, judge and executioner all in one. Poor Cuban prisoners were taken out on a deserted road and shot down without a chance for their lives, and the guardia civiles reported that they had been shot while trying to escape."

And I remembered the story I had heard that day of the fate of Juan Gonzales Rubiera, a young student against whom no evidence of criminal activities against the government of Cuba could be found after his arrest but whose death was decided upon by the police authorities without reference to a court.

Since then the cases of death under the Ley de fuga have swelled into scores and hundreds throughout the island. There are no trials.

And on the morning after Havana's last "Noche Espantosa" scores killed without reports from the police or the Periodicos—bodies hidden away to prevent identification—only two out of twenty killed being taken to the morgue.

"How much we Cubans have to be thankful for," said Don Raimundo, thoughtfully. "Liberty, our own flag flying over Morro, all the guaranteed Spain denied us—of course those guarantees are suspended just now—a free press guarded for us by our constitution. It is marvelous what we have achieved."

Cuba has a free press, guaranteen by the Constitution of Cuba and the wording follows that of the Constitution of the United States. The present regime in Cuba has substituted an old Spanish law for the Cuban constitutional clause providing for a free press and the censorship is the strictest known in any country, with the possible exception of Russia. The Cuban and the American living in Cuba today learns what is happening in Cuba from American newspapers smuggled into the island.

It is impossible to estimate closely the number of students that have been killed by the police, the "Partida de la Porra" and the army. A record of 57 had been compiled in early March, but fully that many have been killed since. Spain killed eight

APPROVAL SEEN FOR FARM BILL

Washington, May 6 (AP)—Administration leaders tonight forecast that the farm relief bill, with its inflation and mortgage financing additions intact—will be in President Roosevelt's hands for approval late Tuesday.

They predicted the Senate will abandon its support of the amendment to guarantee production costs to the farmers. John A. Simpson, president of the Farmers' Union, who championed this plan, conceded today it is destined to "certain defeat" because of strong administration opposition.

Secretary Wallace indicated he is in no mood to withdraw his objections to the proposal which would require him to proclaim a minimum price for farm commodities —the price to be based on a detailed computation of what it costs the farmer to produce them.

Speaker Rainey said the House is certain to reject the production cost provision Monday when it acts on the conference report. Leading supporters of the bill hope the Senate can act later that day and that final action will not be delayed beyond Tuesday afternoon.

SEVEN BILLION GAIN IN STOCKS IN PAST MONTH

Listed Shares on New York Exchange Show 34 Per Cent Advance in Quotations

New York, May 6—Seven billion dollars were added to the valuation of all listed New York Stock Exchange shares by a 34 per cent advance in quotations during April.

This was revealed today in the official compilations showing an aggregate value on May 1 of $26,815,000,000, which compared with $19,814,000,000 at the beginning of April while average price of listed stocks rose to $20.75 a share from $13.41.

Stocks and bonds, as well as commodities, were inclined toward sluggishness today while the dollar fluctuated widely in terms of foreign exchange.

At one time the British pound reached $4.06, a new peak since the nation abandoned gold in September, 1932. Against the French franc, however, the dollar gained considerably, the franc suffering a sharp break from 4.75 cents to 4.59 cents and closing weak near the low level of the day.

Most stocks on the New York Stock Exchange closed lower, the result of a late selling wave.

Britain's Position Is Best Since War

London, May 6 (AP)—Since Britain abandoned the gold standard 18 months ago, the economic and financial advantages resulting have placed this country in a sound position than at any time since the World War, according to financial, political and business leaders.

To the American public perhaps the most interesting fact concerning Britain off the gold standard is that although the man-in-the-street may not be better off, he neither is worse off.

Walsh and Connery Plan to Aid Industry

Latter's Foreign Trade Clause May Be Put In 5-Day Act; Senator Has Bill

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
(Copyright, 1933, Distributed by United News Service, Inc.)

Washington, May 6. The capital is agog with conflicting notions of how to make a reality of President Roosevelt's vision of a planned economy.

Considerable opposition has developed over a bility of the Black-Peryam proposals, with which the House committee on labor has been grappling. When the House committee reports out a final bill—and it will double-less include safeguards suggested by Representative Connery (D., Massachusetts against permitting foreign competitors exempt from high labor standards to take advantage of the situation.

M. S. Rukeyser

Another group, headed by Henry Harriman of Boston, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, has suggested an alternative plan for the self-regulation of industry. Harriman would make voluntary agreements on fair prices, minimum wages, and hours effective through governmental enforcement, provided government authorities approved the recommendations.

SEN. WALSH'S PLAN

Senator David I. Walsh, Massachusetts Democrat and leader in Congress of the movement for modernization of the anti-trust laws, suggested still another way out. He has modified his anti-Trust bill by giving concessions to labor regarding the "yellow dog" contract and collective bargaining.

Mr. Walsh told me he thought industry needs an equivalent of the farm relief bill.

Under the Walsh bill, co-operative agreements in aid of economic planning may be filed with the Federal Trade Commission and may be approved after a hearing.

Moreover, the commission under the Walsh bill which is now before the committee on the judiciary, retains jurisdiction over the subject matter of the co-operative agreements and over persons entering into them.

The bill authorizes full publicity as to co-operative and trade-practice conferences.

NO PRICE-FIXING

In delineating the scope of his proposal, Senator Walsh explained:

"The bill does not contemplate governmental price-fixing of goods or commodities but recognizes that prevalent prices and oppressive practices must not be permitted, and permits the approval of agreements voluntarily entered into, subject to governmental supervision, over the reasonableness of the prices to be charged and the practices to be resorted to.

"I believe this measure would give to business the necessary privilege of co-operation and will at the same time protect the public and preserve the full intent and purpose of the anti-trust laws. Merely substituting co-operation in place of competition as the means to be used to accomplish the goal of reasonable selling prices for manufactured commodities without impairing the purchasing power of agriculture, labor and consumers."

DOLLAR SLIDES TO RECORD LOW

London, May 6 (AP)—As Europe looked for indications of the future American financial policy in President Roosevelt's speech to the people of the United States tomorrow night, the American dollar took a drubbing in exchange markets today.

Continental speculative operations chiefly centering in Paris pushed the dollar down to $4.06 to the pound, setting another new low record for the period since Britain abandoned the gold standard in September, 1931.

The dollar's selling represented gambling by speculators on the possibilities of inflation in the United States.

There also was another factor. A press report from Washington saying that Congress would be a moratorium on war debts apparently was misconstrued in the financial district as meaning that a moratorium actually had been decided on. This belief strengthened the pound against both the dollar and the French franc.

Berlin, May 6 (AP)—For the second time in two days the American dollar set a new low on the Berlin Boerse today, weakening to 3.50 marks, compared with yesterday's close at 3.54.

Demand for Wool in Boston Strong

Demand for wool in the Boston market keeps strong. The local market has a very firm tone, but the withdrawal of the supply has curtailed selling activity. Quotations on all grades were marked up during the past week, although in the case of some of the finer grades, especially the fleeces, the market is nominal.

Interest centers in the western markets, and there, at nearly all important points, higher prices have recently been paid.

Wool tops, or semi-finished yarns, have continued very strong in the Boston spot and New York futures markets. At the former the average grade during the past week advanced four cents to 72 cents, and in New York futures were up 3 to 4.2 cents for the week.

Stock-Curbing Bill Near Goal

Washington, May 6 (INS)—Another special session goal of the Roosevelt administration—Federal legislation to curb the sale of billions of dollars of worthless stocks of holding companies—is within reach.

The administration securities bill, after having been passed by the House late yesterday without a record vote and little opposition, was sent to the Senate today for further action.

A similar bill, reported by the Senate banking committee, will be called up on the floor of the Senate with passage predicted by Chairman Fletcher (D.) of Florida of the banking committee.

While the Senate and House bills differ radically in form, Democratic leaders declared that there is no possibility of a deadlock between the two bodies.

CHAMBER MUM ON ROOSEVELT WAGE APPEAL

Members Not as Enthusiastic on 'New Deal' as Harriman, but Support Tariff Proposal

Washington, May 6. In its appraisal of President Roosevelt's "new deal" program, organized business through the Chamber of Commerce of the United States lagged somewhat behind the genuine liberalism of Henry I. Harriman of Boston, head of the Chamber.

Partly because of the cumbersomeness of the slow working machinery, the Chamber in its resolutions purported to express the "creed" on American business was silent on two of the three requests made upon business by the chief executive in his address before the banquet of the convention.

Nothing was said in the resolutions adopted about the President's request for a cessation of wage-cutting and for higher wages as increases as commodity prices rise. Likewise, the President's plea for unemployment relief through and class interest was ignored.

A Chamber resolution did deal with the President's request for business to bring order out of chaos through co-operation in conjunction with government.

Apparently believing that the political honeymoon is over, the Chamber put forward a few of the Roosevelt policies for criticism. It opposed the President's plan for development of Muscle Shoals, opposed the use of an extraordinary budget for capital expenditures for public works, and asked that action on deferred until the next session on the President's request for a security bill.

On the other hand, it supported numerous administration policies, including that of rehabilitating the farm, railroads and merchant marine ships. Likewise, it supported the President's demand for reciprocal trade agreements, though the Chamber scrupulously refrained from indorsing Secretary Hull's attacks on economic nationalism.

Trade Control Bill Is Drafted

Washington, May 6 (INS)—Draft of the far-reaching bill for government control of production along the lines of industrial self-regulation suggested in President Roosevelt's first address to Congress, became public today.

Senator Wagner (D.) of New York, head of the drafting committee, said the completed measure probably would be laid before the President today.

If the President gives his approval, Senator Wagner said, it will be made to pass the bill at this session.

Based on the general principle that business must set its own house in order, with the federal government supervising actively but to eliminate cut-throat competition and unfair practices by minority groups, the measure calls for a federal board with power to legalize agreements by units in the various industries to control the regular prices, production and wages.

Bank Clearings of Week Are Lowered

Bank clearings at leading cities the past week, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., were $4,504,913,000, off 15.6 per cent from last year, especially New York clearings were $3,301,487,000, the loss being 12.3 per cent, while the aggregate at other leading cities was $1,203,426,000, was 23.5 per cent smaller.

Relatively, this year's payments were very much less than the first week of May, last year. This is indicated clearly by the fact that this year's clearings exceed the previous week by $863,357,000, while a year ago the amount for the corresponding period was $1,095,955,000 greater.

BOSTON STOCK PRICES LOWER

Moderately lower prices ruled at the close yesterday in dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange. The list was firm at the start of the session, but softened in the second period and closing was off with losses ranging from fractions to a point or more.

Edison Electric moved against the general trend, gaining slightly more than a point while the remainder of the utility list except American Telephone was off about 2 points at its closing price of 109½. Eastern Gas & Fuel declined more than a point at its closing price of 12¾. Boston Elevated was down a point to 58.

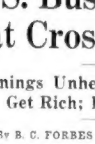
Rail shares were only moderately lower with Atchison and Pennsylvania showing fractional decessions. United Fruit was soft, sagging 2 points to 45¾. Gillette and United Shoe were fractionally lower.

Norwich & Worcester preferred was strong, soaring over 6 points to 82½. Libby, McNeil & Libby was a major fraction higher. Eastern Gas & Fuel preferred lowered a point.

U. S. Business Stands at Crossroads of Fate

Warnings Unheeded in Mad Scramble to Get Rich; Roosevelt Issues Call

By B. C. FORBES



B. C. Forbes

"American industry faces either a larger measure of political government or a larger measure of self-government. Industry itself will decree which . . . shall in the future adopt self-government satisfactory to the nation or shall it let matters drift from bad to worse and be subjected to radical political government."

That warning was published by the writer four years ago, in April, 1929, when everything apparently was booming beautifully.

Again, fully two years ago, the writer warned:

"Unless our leading capitalists and executives voluntarily bring about a revolution of thought concerning the ultimate purpose and objective of industry, a revolution may by and by be forced upon them . . .

"Only a revolution is ambition and vision and aim can avert ultimate disaster to our whole economic structure. Wellbeing of the country, not merely wellbeing of the corporation, must hereafter enter much more largely into the reckoning. There must be ushered in a new conception of the raison d'etre of industry.

UP TO INDUSTRY

"Industrialists must recognize that they have responsibilities beyond mere moneymaking, that on them more than on any other group devolves the responsibility of creating national prosperity, an employed population, a higher standard of living, a more generous measure of leisure than could be possibly attainable under a Stalin or a Mussolini or a Norman Thomas.

The alternative is wise voluntary action by industry will surely and certainly be hindering action by politicians."

Four years ago, the politicians were busily engaged in drafting legislation to bring industry under political regulation which may develop into political domination.

There have been proffered a thousand explanations of how and why so much distress has overtaken this country—the world war, insane speculation, overproduction, the creation of securities, abnormal borrowing, etc., etc., etc.

As I see it, the basic explanation, the basic reason is extremely simple, extremely plain; almost all of us became motivated by mercenary selfishness.

EVERYBODY TO BLAME

Bankers and underwriters thought only of garnering huge immediate profits; industrialists concentrated solely on striving to become bigger and bigger regardless of the effect of their actions upon the whole economic structure; speculators gave no adequate thought to the real worth of stocks but had their minds only on buying to unload on somebody else at higher prices; farmers didn't stop to ask whether this, that or the next crop would be produced in greater volume than could be consumed, but confined their vision to what they regarded as their own individual self-interest.

Each was out for number one; each was perfectly willing that the devil should take the hindmost. Instead of each saying "I am for each," each thought wholly and solely of himself regardless of the consequences to others.

Well, the inevitable resulted, namely, trouble for all.

What we sadly learned that entirely different tactics must be followed if sounder conditions, better times, more normal living are to be restored."

The danger now is that the pendulum may swing it far in the other direction, that governmental domination and dictation will injuriously stifle individual initiative, that the spirit of enterprise which made America great will be dulled and discouraged by undue political restraints.

We are at the crossroads. May our afflictions have chastened us all of us—into giving a more rational measure of thought to the matter of "getting back to work," into recognizing and realizing and accepting that, in the most profound sense, we are our brother's keeper.

BUSINESS BOOM IS SPREADING COAST TO COAST

Steel Orders Pile Up, Factory Whistles and Rails Busy as U. S. Industry Awakes

Chicago, May 6 (AP) The mercury in American's business barometer rose today under impetus of favorable news from coast to coast.

With factory whistles playing a tune of good times, the railroads finding business where none had been for months, farm prices selling and employment increasing, there were predictions from everywhere that "we're on the way." Some of the increase was seasonal, but far from all of it.

From the great steel centers of Youngstown, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Gary and Cleveland there were reports of increased operations, orders piling up.

The railroads turning out three times as much steel as a few months ago with predictions that Pennsylvania Railroadgetown are would reach 41 per cent of capacity next week. The reason: demand for 42,000 finished steel at newly humming factories.

Railroad railroadings, another seasonal thing, business indicator, took the sharpest jump of the year during the week of April 29, the American Railway Association reported.

To haul the increased freight made by new and increased other outputs, the railroads needed 42,706 more cars than were used in the previous week—a total of 835,678. Purchases still under a year ago, authorities regarded the carloading spurt as especially important because much of the increase was for miscellaneous merchandise.

Business leaders in several instances announced their employes would share in any new prosperity. Employers announcing salary boosts from 10 per cent to "back to normal" were the American Stove Equipment Corporation of Detroit, Muskegon and New York, Jacobson and Sons and the Simplicity Pattern Company, both of New York.

LEADERS DOWN 1 TO 3 POINTS FOR WEEK-END

Issues Ending With Net Declines Number 471, and 170 Finish the Session Higher

By BROADAN WALL

New York, May 6—Leading shares sold down one to 3 points or more in today's short session of the New York Stock Exchange. Issues ending the day with declines numbered 471, while 170 closed higher and 125 were unchanged.

Speculative enthusiasm was dampened somewhat in the principal markets. Stocks and bonds both were subjected to pressure sufficient to close speculative issues net lower.

The reaction was not very substantial, especially when measured against the previous sharp upturn. Yet it was evident that the markets had run into considerable profit taking sales and outright liquidation.

MANY RUMORS AFLOAT

During the short session in the markets rumors flew thick and fast concerning impending developments of far reach magnitude, the most insistent being that France over the week-end officially would announce abandonment of the gold standard.

"Whether true or not, this rumor had the effect of creating distinct weakness in the price of the franc. It dropped 20 points, or one-fifth of a cent, before it rallied again. Meanwhile the latter was making no progress against the pound sterling. The latter closed today at $4.06 in European dealings and closed here still above $4.

The foreign exchanges all are fluctuating wildly while everybody tries to outguess the next one on the outcome of the whole world's currency scheming. Depreciation in the dollar is predicted solely on fears that we might enter into a reckless inflation, which of course has not been encouraged by this government or any of its responsible officials.

French abandonment of gold would be a further confirmation of a worldwide inflation already at hand in the United States and in England. Some of the interest in selling of stocks was predicated on the substantial advances already scored, which probably embraced the technical position of the market regardless of external influences.

Examination of the week's results in stocks disclosed that the average gain of the leading industrial shares showed virtually no change from the close a week ago. In other words, they had been moving around all week without scoring much progress. Furthermore, an unusual amount of weakness had developed at the prices and this, too, discouraged speculators who had been anxious for a reasonably natural market.

RISE IN COMMODITIES

To date the principal improvement has been scored in commodity prices, but this must sooner or later reflect itself into a firmer general price structure or should be recognized, too, that this betterment has been scored actually without the use of a single dollar of "inflation," "reflation" or any other artificial method. It may represent speculative anticipation, but the fact remains that commodities now command materially higher prices.

The short interest as of May 1 was revealed as 1,413,330 shares, a drop of but 49,344 shares from the total of April 3. Moody's Index of 45 leading commodities during the week rose to the highest level in 18 months, while the market averages were run up to the best marks since December, 1931. Turnover in shares for the week was the largest in about three years.

The dollar was at the lowest level in terms of sterling ever reached that it has touched since going off the gold standard. The bond market this week was at its best since the start of February. Net gains in the wheat market, despite violent fluctuations, were limited to around 2 cents a bushel.

Steel Castings Co. Quarter Losses More

This compares with net loss, including $65,240 provision for shrinkage in marketable securities, of $186,796 in the first quarter of 1932.

GUY NAMED AS SHIELD IN PROBE OF BANK CRASH

State Commissioner Accused of Withholding Information in 1931 on Salem Trust Co.

Assertion that Bank Comr. Arthur W. Guy withheld information in 1931 on the condition of the Salem Trust Co. is the charge in the answer filed yesterday in Federal court to the suit of Guy to recover $70,000 from the Federal National Bank, Receiver Herbert Pearson and the Federal National Co.

Denial that Federal National officials accepted $70,000 advance from the Salem bank "at a time when the Federal National Co. was wholly and irreparably insolvent" also was made in the answer which contains 17 pages and goes into details of the Guy suit.

The answer further states that Daniel C. Mulloney, president of the Federal National Bank, was not the actual owner of stock in the Salem bank registered in the name of Arthur A. Mulloiane who was instead, the "straw man" for John A. Deery, jailed president of the Salem bank.

"The said plaintiff, Arthur Guy, bank commissioner," says the answer, "failed to disclose complete information to the directors of the said Salem Trust Co.

"Notwithstanding provisions of the banking laws of this Commonwealth in regard thereto, and notwithstanding the fact that this information of said plaintiff, Arthur Guy, bank commissioner, showed an insolvent condition of the said Salem Trust Co.

"By reason of the failure of the said plaintiff, Arthur Guy, bank commissioner, to disclose this information of insolvency in his possession the said Federal National Bank was not informed as to the true condition of the trust company through John T. Morrissey, its vice-president, even though he was a director of said trust company for a certain period."

Roosevelt's Trip On Yacht Halted

Washington, May 6 (INS)—Drizzling rain prompted President Roosevelt to abandon his plan of an overnight yacht trip down the Potomac.

The President entertained Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, the German envoy, at a formal lunch at the White House, and spent the afternoon discussing world economic problems with him.

The re-arranged plan calls for Mr. Roosevelt to board the Sequoia early tomorrow and go down the river. He will devote the entire day to drafting his nation-wide radio speech scheduled for 9:45 Sunday night.

Battle of the Sea Filmed

FOUR REMARKABLE PICTURES, the first of their type ever filmed, showing the fight that took place at the bottom of the sea in Samarang, Dutch East Indies, between a tiger-shark and a giant octopus. The cameraman was assigned the difficult task of photographing a fight of this nature for the movie, "Samarang" (out of the deep). This is one of the results. The pictures, in order:

No. 1 shows the shark maneuvering about seeking a favorable position in which to attack the octopus, which is shown floating above the man-eater. The shark rolls on his back to strike his victim from underneath. A necessary move because of the position of a shark's mouth. No. 2 shows the shark closing on his all but helpless victim. The death grip, once obtained, is never relinquished until the ugly monster of the deep is dead. No. 3 illustrates a dying agony of the octopus, the shark is setting on the bottom of the ocean as the fight near its end. No. 4 shows the shark dining off one of the tenacles of the now-dead octopus.

DRIVE TO AID GERMAN JEWS

Boston Jewry will take the lead tonight in an international campaign to aid refugee Jews of Germany and other countries to settle in Palestine. The move will open with a dinner at Symphony Hall, at which Samuel Untermeyer of New York, Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York and many others, including Dr. Solomon Goldman, Chicago rabbi and editor, and Abraham Shepiacoff, New York labor leader, are scheduled to speak.

The Boston work will fit in with the plans of Dr. Chaim Weizmann, international Zionist leader, who recently traveled from Palestine to London to take charge of the worldwide work.

Greetings of the Commonwealth will be extended at tonight's dinner by Lieut.-Gov. Jasper G. Hacker, and Mayor Curley will greet the diners in behalf of the city.

Untermeyer, a worldwide figure in Jewish affairs, is expected to reply to the Nazi press, in which he has been severely denounced. He is also scheduled to talk on the reported persecution of Jews by Germany's Hitlerites.

Peru in Wrong With League on 3-Ship Navy

Geneva, May 6 (AP) — The League of Nations today asked Peru to explain why a Peruvian naval squadron has been sent from the Pacific waters across to the Atlantic Ocean, whence access is possible by the Amazon River to the Leticia area, site of Peru's warlike dispute with Colombia.

The league also, through its advisory committee on the Leticia dispute, requested neighboring countries to furnish any information which might throw light upon the purpose of this Peruvian naval maneuver.

Officials of the league are concerned lest the movement of the Peruvian ships, one cruiser and two submarines, may be directed against Colombian forces now attempting to regulate the Leticia situation.

The body was discovered by Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Davis, with whom Miss Jensen had made her home since last December. The motor of the car was running and Miss Jensen was in the front seat.

CRUSADERS TO WAR ON RACKETS

New York, May 6—Fred G. Clark, commander-in-chief of The Crusaders, a militant organization formed to combat the lawless elements of the country, announced today that plans have been made for a mass meeting in Madison Square Garden on the night of May 26. The main feature of the meeting will be to enroll high school and college boys.

Clark said:

"It is high time that decent citizens throw the power of organized strength against the highly organized racketeering elements. The McMath kidnaping case has brought to a climax the extent to which lawlessness prevails throughout the country.

"The Lindbergh tragedy should have aroused the country. Proper action can be brought about only through the force of large numbers, and this force brought to bear on the source of the evil."

The efforts of the Crusaders, according to Clark, will be directed towards destruction of racketeers, gangsters and liquor-corrupted politicians as well as organized gangs of kidnapers.

I invested wisely in

HEARST 7% SHARES

You can do the same by paying only

$1 PER SHARE MONTHLY

One of the smartest moves I ever made in my life was to purchase some Hearst 7% shares.

Just a little over two years ago I had a modest sum of money on hand doing nothing—just plain lazy dollars.

You see I felt afraid to invest in the market and was seeking to place my funds in some seasoned and time tested enterprise that had a real future ahead of it. No wildcat schemes for me! I just wanted an investment that would furnish a steady and liberal income.

Then along came the announcement that William Randolph Hearst, the world's greatest newspaper publisher and editor, had offered his thousands of employes and customers the opportunity to share in the profits of his colossal enterprise.

It was the ideal investment that I had been looking for, and I was quick to grasp this opportunity for investment.

Throughout the two most drastic years that I have ever witnessed, I have received regularly—every three months—my quarterly cash dividends. During all this time I have never had a moment of worry over the stock market going up or down. I knew that I would receive my dividends.

My 7% Hearst dividends have enabled me to be independent as a result of this investment. Do you know that only seven out of every one hundred men are able to retire at the age of 65? I thank my lucky stars that I made such a wise move in buying an interest in the greatest publishing enterprise the world has ever known. Newspapers are an integral part of the nation's daily life and will always play an important part in it. Look at the splendid record of Hearst Consolidated during the years of this depression. It has been able to pay dividends out of ample current earnings. What more could I ask?

You can purchase Hearst Class "A" preferred shares either for cash at $25 per share or without any extra cost for $1 per share monthly over a period of 25 months. All payments earn 7% from the day received.

HERDOUBLE CHIN IS VANISHING
Shape Growing Normal
"Why am I taking Kruschen Salts? Because I was getting so broad across the hips I was ashamed of myself. I've been taking Kruschen about 7 months and they certainly are bringing my shape down to a normal condition and what is nice about them (to my way of thinking) is they haven't taken flesh from my cheeks but to my surprise my double chin is vanishing, for which anyone should be glad." Mrs. P. E. Gardiner, Worcester, Mass. (Jan. 3, 1935).
To lose fat and at the same time gain a physical attractiveness and feel spirited and youthful take one-half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning. Cut down on pastry and fatty meats—go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar.
A jar that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle at any druggists in the world, but be sure and get Kruschen Salts the SAFE way to reduce wide hips, prominent front and a double chin and again feel the joy of living — money back if dissatisfied after the first jar.

Jewish Book Week Revives Old Works

By SIBYL SOROKER

Jewish Book Week's seventh national observance will begin next Sunday. It is designed to re-awaken the consciousness of the Jew through the vast treasures of literature written about and by the Jews, accumulated for ages.

The plans of the sponsors, headed by Dr. Albert Ehrenfried and the trustees of this annual c[illegible]ation on Jewish books were outlined in an interview with Miss Fanny Goldstein, librarian of the West End branch, Boston Public Library, a national authority on books of Jewish interest and on the Jew in literature, the compiled of the "Judaica" published annually by the Boston Public Library in connection with Jewish Book Week.

RARE HEBREW BOOKS

Special programs will be presented during the week on various aspects of Jewish literature and Jewish authors. Special exhibits of rare Hebraica and Judaica will be on display at the various branches of the Boston Public Library. Study groups will discuss unusual Jewish books. Synagogues, schools, libraries and other groups will lay special emphasis on the Jews in literature.

Wholly through Miss Goldstein's efforts and through the co-operation of the Public Library, Boston has become the center from which goes information on Jewish books to all parts of the country and even abroad.

"This week alone," declared Miss Goldstein, "at least 200 requests have been received from the libraries throughout the country, even from Rome and Amsterdam, all eager for information which may serve their communities. Sixty-four new titles for the Public Library collection have been ordered for Jewish Book Week use.
